Gas Rationing Decreed In D.C., Eastern States; Civilians Cut One-Fifth

Service Stations Curtailed 10 Pct., But Private Driver's Loss Is Greater

The Government last night ordered a 10 per cent cut in gasoline deliveries to all service stations in 17 Atlantic Coast States and the District of Columbia, and warned that this "interim measure" is expected to be followed by even "more severe curtailments" in the future.

The order, issued by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply in response to a recommendation by Harold L. Ickes, Defense Petroleum Coordinator, was announced as effective immediately.

As petroleum coordinator, a post to which he was named by the President June 1, Ickes has the power only to "recommend" conservation measures. In issuing the gas cut order through OPACS, it was believed Ickes is relying on the President's emergency powers to make the decree effective.

Effect of the order, Ickes estimated, may be a curtailment of "nonessential uses" — passenger pleasure car consumption—approximating as much as 20 per cent, because the order recommends the maintenance of 100 per cent supply for "essential" services, so that a heavier proportion of the cut will fall on private drivers.

Based on July Delivery

Specifically, the proclamation instructs suppliers of gasoline to deliver to resellers (service stations and garages for the most part), and consumers, at a rate equal to not more than 90 per cent of the amount delivered in July.

It also declared that persons maintaining or operating service stations shall make deliveries to consumers "in such a manner as to distribute such deliveries proportionately throughout each day."

Detailed methods for making this sort of apportionment were not specified and it was not immediately clear as to what steps service station operators would take to reduce their sales by 10 per cent—whether a "first come, first served," policy would be followed, or whether restricted amounts of gasoline would be pumped out to each customer.

OPACS also said that curtailment in gasoline, made necessary in the entire Atlantic area east of the Appalachians because of recent diversion of 50 or more oil tankers to Britain, probably would result in a reduction to private auto operators of somewhat more than 10 per cent.

Four Categories Excepted

This will follow, the OPACS announcement declared, because four classes of users: Commercial vehicles, vehicles necessary for public health and safety, including ambulances and physicians' cars; farm machinery and farm trucks, and Federal, State and local governmental cars, are to be guaranteed their "minimum necessary requirements."

Such users, it was added, will probably not be cut very much from their present consumption levels and "therefore the burden will be borne by ordinary civilian users of gasoline."

"Supplies available for their use," the OPACS statement continued, "will be curtailed by somewhat more than 10 per cent."

While Ickes moved to cut gas sales, a move was started in Congress to take control of the Nation's petroleum supply out of Ickes's hands. Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, yesterday introduced a resolution which would abolish Ickes' post of petroleum coordinator, and place all authority under a newly created agency.

The restriction, the first actual involuntary rationing of gasoline, applies to the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, both Carolinas, Georgia, Florida east of the Apalachicola River, and the District of Columbia.

Ickes Blames Hitler

In a statement accompanying the curtailment proclamation, Ickes reported that gasoline sales in the area affected had risen 8 per cent in the week ended August 8. He stated that the public "has paid little heed to our repeated requests for a reduction in its consumption of petroleum products."

"Reluctantly," he added, "I conclude that a people accustomed to a profligate use of petroleum have difficulty in visualizing an impend-

Reserve Board for 18-Month Limit on Installment Buying

The Federal Reserve Board last night began its moves to curb installment buying in the United States by proposing an 18-month limit for completing payments on a score of consumer items, including automobiles.

Charged by President Roosevelt to act swiftly and effectively to head off inflation and reduce the buying of articles containing large amounts of defense materials, the board, after conferences here, made public a tentative draft of its initial regulations, and said a revised list would be made public next week.

Autos Included

On the tentative list the board placed autos, both used and new; airplanes, power-driven boats, outboard motors, motorcycles, refrigerators, washing machines, ironers, vacuum cleaners, stoves and ranges, electric dishwashers, air-conditioning units, radios, oil burners, furnaces, water heaters, plumbing and sanitary fixtures, and residential repair contracts. Small cash loans also would have to be paid off in 18 months or less.

In addition, the board proposed a minimum one-third down payment for autos, airplanes, boats and motorcycles; a 20 per cent down payment on radios, refrigerators and similar household appliances, and 15 per cent on heating, plumbing and air-conditioning units.

Student Loans Excepted

The proposed limit on small cash loans would only apply to loans of less than $1000 which are to be repaid in more than three months. Small loans for students and for home remodeling would be exempt.

The tentative draft revealed a plan of the board to enforce its rules by issuing licenses to all stores, banks and other businesses which give installment credit. Violators of the regulation then would have their licenses revoked and thus be prohibited from any further extension of installment credit.

Wickard Acts To Expedite 1c Milk in D.C.

Sets Standards For Securing The Food Cheaply

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard yesterday took action which should expedite provision of 1-cent milk for school children in low income neighborhoods of Washington.

He signed an authorization setting up standards which the Capital, as well as other cities, must meet in order to qualify for penny half-pints subsidized with Federal funds.

Milk distribution in Washington operates under a Federal marketing order. This satisfies one of the conditions.

The order specifies that producers shall receive a special rate for surplus milk sold at low cost to the needy. This fulfills another of Wickard's requisites.

No. 3 in the list of standards states that "operation of the program must not result in a decrease in total returns to milk producers supplying milk to the area." Although the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which is opposed to any broadening of the relief milk program here, will attempt to prove the contrary, those qualified to know believe that penny half-

Va. Urged to Cede Land to District

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, last night said legislation would be drafted calling upon Virginia to cede back to the District territory Congress gave back to Virginia in 1846.

The land sought to be repossessed is that part of the original 10-mile-square area contributed by Virginia in 1789 for the seat of government, embracing a large part of the city of Alexandria and all of Arlington county.

House Votes 100 Additional Police for D. C.

Senate Vacations Hamper Speed Of War on Crime

The House yesterday rushed through legislation to reinforce the Metropolitan Police Department with 100 additional men, but the Congressional crime drive lost momentum in the Senate where wholesale vacation departures threatened a two-week delay.

In a half-hour debate, House members manifested grave concern over the city's record of criminal assault cases, slapping hard at police administration here and, in the case of one legislator, calling for a boost in the department of 250 or 300 men.

The increase, declared Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, "ought to be at least 300 men." If necessary, he added, "we ought to call in one or two companies of Marines."

Rankin Drops Amendment

Rankin offered an amendment for a 250-man increase, but withdrew it when Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, declared that tighter control of crime in Washington could not be gained by "overloading" the department with a "promiscuous number" of police.

"If there is no improvement in Washington crime," warned Rankin, "I am going to call you back here in less than a week, because I can come here and make a point of no quorum and vote down a motion to adjourn and you will have to come back here and protect the people of the District."

Representatives and Senators started vacations yesterday with the understanding that while they are away sessions of both bodies will be infrequent and perfunctory.

To take care of any eventuality, the House yesterday adopted a special resolution authorizing Woodrum, who was named Speaker pro tempore, to sign the measure whether or not the House is in session.

All U. S. Will Adopt Fast Time If D. C. Leads, Schulte Says

The entire country would go on daylight saving time if Washington should adopt the plan, it was predicted last night by Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, ranking majority member of the House District Committee.

"There is no better way," he said, "to induce the Nation to save electric power than to have the Government of its own Capital city take the initial step."

About a month ago, Schulte suggested enactment of daylight time in Washington. His proposal was made during a meeting of the District Committee.

"I am very much in sympathy with the idea," he declared. "It is very necessary to have daylight saving time now—and throughout the year—in order to conserve power for national defense activities."

He added the change in time here would "give the folks a chance for another hour of daylight recreation."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, indicated he would not oppose the switch in time here "if that's what the people want."

He said he had "an open mind" on the question and agreed with proponents of daylight time—headed by President Roosevelt—that considerable power savings would result.

In most instances, Capitol Hill spokesmen on the subject were in

Two revelations of growing dangers to the United States were made last night by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War.

Stimson said "we have reason to believe" that a major advance will be made by Germany into North Africa and South America.

He also said that some of the "most significant symptoms" which invariably forecast the coming of a new Axis attack are in evidence in South America.

These warnings were made in a radio message by the Secretary to the men of the United States Army in which he described why it was deemed vital to extend service of selectees, Guardsmen and Reserve officers by 18 months.

Uneasy Concerning Dakar

Stimson said that the most dangerous avenue of attack upon the United States lies in South and Central America.

"At Dakar," he said, "which is held by Vichy forces, now friendly with Germany, the great western bulge of the African coast narrows the South Atlantic Ocean until the distance from Dakar to the easternmost point of Brazil can be easily traversed either by air or by sea."

Stimson cited recurring reports of unrest and Nazi activity which come from many South American countries. He warned that if an Axis power by combining an air attack with a Fifth Column "revolution" should succeed in finding lodgment on the coast of South America, "we should have a real task indeed—for it would not be difficult for an enemy lodged there to get within easy bombing distance of the Panama Canal."

The Secretary told the country's soldiers that the extension of service "means sacrifice on your part." He praised the fine spirit of the Army and the devotion "which you have given your training thus far—sometimes under very discouraging circumstances."

Stimson sketched in general the crisis which caused the Army to seek extension of service. He said that if Hitler succeeds in conquering western Russia he will have under his control over a total of 370 million persons. Today, he said, three Axis nations, Germany, Japan and Italy, "openly announce their intention of going further with their conquest of the world."

"The American Government which failed to take measures of protection against such a dire prospect for the future would be faithless indeed to the interests of its people," he said.

The Secretary of War outlined the Nation's defense steps thus far, stating that what we have done has been absolutely essential to protect us "from an ever-approaching and developing danger."

He stressed the "purely defensive" nature of American strategy, adding, "We have not been planning any ex-

Iceland Sealane Cleared Without Shot, Knox Says

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 15 (AP).—Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today that "not a shot" had been fired by the United States Navy in carrying out President Roosevelt's order to keep clear the sealanes to Iceland.

Questioned whether the Navy had been forced to do any shooting in patroling waters between the United States and Iceland, Knox said:

"No, not a shot has been fired. Not an Axis flag has been sighted. They're keeping out of our way, apparently. And the sinking of ships in that area has stopped for some reason or other."

Knox made the statement at a press conference.

Later tonight in an address at Durham he said of the eight peace aims promulgated by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill: "I hope that the President will offer these to Congress for its approval," and God help that Senator or Congressman who votes against it."

GERMAN military reports describe increasing Nazi pressure on Odessa and Nikolaev. Page 3.

Advance Is Costly

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), Aug. 16. With the fourth grand German offensive striking heavily toward Leningrad and the Red army defenses pictured unofficially as holding in the critical Ukraine sector, the Soviets tersely announced today that fierce fighting was continuing on the long front.

The Russian communique reverted to the broadest of generalities and for the third time this week failed to mention a specific sector.

[The Moscow radio reported an alleged mutiny among members of the German 116th Infantry Regiment which was only subdued after 11 ringleaders were shot. Similar incidents were said to have occurred in other German units.]

The German drive on Leningrad was from three directions—from the north on the Karelian Isthmus, from the south around Staraya Russa, and from Estonia on the west.

Of the Ukrainian theater, where the Germans have made their deepest gains since the invasion began on June 22, and where the Russians previously have acknowledged withdrawals from Kirovograd and Pervomaisk, the Soviet command made no mention either in its communiques of yesterday afternoon or of today.

Loss Is Minimized

But other Russian sources insisted that the loss of the two towns admitted, lying about 100 to 115 miles above the Black Sea port of Nikolaev, implied no disaster.

Actually, they said, these and other retirements were occasioned by a Nazi offensive which has been checked with enormous losses for the invaders, and today was relatively inactive.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said that smaller German tank units, now reinforced by artillery and infantry, still are trying to snip the Red army rear, and that parachutes again were being used to drop men, light tanks and armored cars.

"We should not underestimate the force and capacity of the enemy," said Pravda. "Although Hitler's army already has suffered great losses, it may again throw large tank masses into the attack."

Pravda estimated that the Germans started the war with a total of 170 divisions, including 60 mobile units, of which 25 were tank divisions. In the first six weeks of battle, the paper calculated, the Germans lost 15 tank divisions.

Heaviest Fighting in North

It was in the north where the day's heaviest fighting was reported—about Kakisalmi, 75 miles above Leningrad on the Karelian Isthmus; about Staraya Russa, some 150 miles to the southeast of the city, and

Nazi Parachutist Shot by British As Spy; Had Radio

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 15.—Josef Jakobs, described as a German national, was executed today following his conviction as a spy.

Jakobs, who was born in 1898 in Luxembourg was shot at the Tower of London.

A war office statement said he was a noncommissioned officer in the German army attached to the meteorological service and had been arrested shortly after he landed by parachute in the vicinity of London.

The statement said that at the time of his arrest Jakobs wore civilian clothes, under a flying suit, and a parachutist's helmet.

It said he carried a transmitting and receiving radio, a large sum of English money and an emergency food ration which included brandy and German sausage.

Among his equipment was a small spade, described as for the purpose of burying his parachute and flying kit.

He was arrested 12 hours after he landed and was convicted after a secret court-martial August 4-5.

7½-Billion Defense Bill Ready to Sign

Conferees Restore 750 Millions of Sum Eliminated by Senate

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The House and Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a $7,576,486,948 defense appropriation bill after conferees had restored to the measure 750 million dollars out of a $1,347,000,000 ordnance outlay urged by Secretary of War Stimson as being "of extreme importance to the security of the country."

Both chambers accepted the conference report on a voice vote, thus completing Congressional action on the first supplemental defense appropriation bill of the fiscal year 1942.

The $1,347,000,000 expenditure for tanks, anti-tank guns and anti-aircraft guns had been stricken from the bill by the Senate, on the recommendation of its Appropriations Committee, on the ground that the equipment was necesary only for an Army in excess of three million men.

Stimson, in his letter to Chairman Glass of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said yesterday that few, if any, of the weapons requested "would not, under certain conditions, be required for an Army of three million men or even less."

The War Secretary's letter revealed that part of the funds would be used to place orders for gyrostabilizers to enable tanks to fire effectively while in motion.

Stimson warned that "the spectacle we now face of a continent arming against us to the limit of its industrial capacity makes painfully evident the unwisdom of limiting our weapons to those who at any given moment we assume that a limited number of men may use.

"The continuity of our production lines and the necessity of having a reasonable quantity of modern

Beaverbrook Hints European Invasion in '42

Effort to Be Made With or Without U. S., Informants Say

By Cecil B. Dickson 2d
International News Service Staff Writer

Lord Beaverbrook, dynamic British minister of supply, yesterday moved mysteriously and speedily in the Capital, laying the groundwork for a ten-billion-dollar increase in the American lend-lease program.

In conferences with W. Averell Harriman, America's expediter of the lease-lend program, and other Government officials, the slang-slinging former Canadian let it be known that in 1942 the British plan a land invasion of Europe with or without American forces.

The British timetable, described by persons in contact with the fast-moving supply chief, calls for preparation for the invasion in the remaining months of this year, invasion of Europe in 1942, and "victory in 1943."

Beaverbrook said he was here to ask the United States to send "more tanks and more planes," besides other armament needed for a land invasion of Europe.

Leaving his quarters at the Mayflower Hotel early in the morning, Beaverbrook went to a smart men's and women's clothing store and bought suits, underwear, shirts, socks and shoes—and paid cash instead of "putting it on the cuff," as he said he is doing in his war supplies buying.

Aides of the bald and smiling Britisher said that he would stay in the United States longer than originally planned because of the loss of the Right Hon. Arthur Purvis, chairman of the British supply council in North America.

Purvis was killed in an airplane accident in England along with 21 other persons, including 12 American aviators, when his plane, taking

Roosevelt to Come Ashore Today From Historic Cruise

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 15.—President Roosevelt will be back in Washington Sunday to initiate far-reaching measures for "final destruction" of Nazi Germany.

Temporary White House headquarters here announced tonight that Mr. Roosevelt would land at Rockland, Me., tomorrow afternoon, ending his "vacation" cruise that brought him face to face with British Prime Minister Churchill.

The President will proceed immediately to the Capital, arriving some time Sunday, it was revealed.

There was an unconfirmed report that the British prime minister might be aboard the Presidential yacht Potomac when it docks at the small Maine harbor, but word from the President dispelled the rumor.

Speculation that the British statesman might go ashore with the President ashore was silenced when the President, late in the evening, radioed to White House offices ashore that he would disembark with Harry L. Hopkins, his close friend and lend-lease aide, and the small group of official friends who set off on the vacation cruise with him.

Hopkins, who attended the parleys at sea, has just returned from a flying visit to London and Moscow on lend-lease matters. His report of Churchill's arrival in London had been received here, occasioning

Leaders Urge Soviet Chief Act Quickly; Predict New 'Fronts' Soon

Bulletin

Moscow, Aug. 16 (AP).—Premier Joseph Stalin told the United States and British ambassadors today he is ready to "take all necessary steps" for the conferences proposed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Stalin received the ambassadors at the Kremlin, where they delivered to him a joint note from Roosevelt and Churchill.

The premier expressed to them the thanks of the Soviet government for the offer of "maximum aid" contained in the note and said he would expedite arrangements for the proposed conversations.

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of Britain, foreseeing "a long and hard path" ahead in the grim conflict with Naziism, yesterday proposed a three-power conference with Premier Josef Stalin of Russia for the allocation of available war supplies. The meeting would be held in Moscow.

Praising "the splendid defense" of the Soviet military forces, but pointing out that "further fighting fronts" may be developed, the heads of the great English-speaking nations declared:

"Our resources, though immense, are limited, and it must become a question as to where and when these resources can best be used to further to the greatest extent our common effort. This applies equally to manufactured war supplies and to raw materials."

Many Shiploads on Way

Nevertheless, the two statesmen told Stalin, "we are at the moment cooperating to provide you with the very maximum of supplies that you most urgently need. Already many shiploads have left our shores and more will leave in the immediate future."

The message apparently left it to Stalin to set the date for the meeting, but in urgent terms it concluded:

"We realize fully how vitally important to the defeat of Hitlerism is the brave and steadfast resistance of the Soviet Union and we feel, therefore, that we must not in any circumstances fail to act quickly and immediately in this matter on planning the program for the future allocation of our joint resources."

Revelation of the proposal came as a rapid-fire development from the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conferences at sea last Saturday and Sunday, and while repercussions from those talks were being heard around the world.

Dispatches from many lands last night presented these phases of the rapidly tensing international situation:

An indirect warning to Japan not to attempt interference with the flow of supplies for Russia across the Pacific was given by Britain, the United Press reported from London. It quoted an authoritative source as saying "Britain will do her best to secure fulfillment of the policy adopted regarding aid to Russia."

Rejected 8-Point Plan

Japan rejected the eight-point program for the post-war period proclaimed by Mr. Roosevelt and the British prime minister, as going counter to all of Japan's traditions, methods, aims and slogans, a New York Times dispatch from Tokyo declared. Japan's goal was said to be to "liberate the Orient from the shackles of white capi-

INDIAN ROMANCE

Perhaps you have read Herbert Ravenel Sass' stories in the leading magazines, or his novels, among them "War Drums" and "The Way of the Wild." Sunday's Post offers you another novel by this writer of historical romances. "Emperor Brims" takes you back to 1715, the year when Charleston was endangered by a coalition of the Indian tribes under the leadership of an extraordinary chief, the Emperor Brims. Against this powerful confederacy a handful of white men, two Indian women, and a white girl pitted themselves—and won! There's adventure, history, and romance in this Sunday Post novel.

FOUR NEW DEALERS

There's an inner circle of men on whom the President leans during these troubled times, and two of these men were with him at the mid-ocean conference with Churchill: Sumner Welles and Harry Hopkins. Sunday's Post brings you a chance to get better acquainted with these two, and with two others of that inner circle, William Knudsen and Lowell Mellett, in an article on top New Dealers.

LOVE & the PLEBE

A midshipman puts a delicate problem to Mary Haworth: since he can't marry for at least three more years, and doesn't think a girl would wait that long for him, should he—in the enforced absence of true love—turn monk or satyr? Put women from his mind entirely or . . .? Mary Haworth doesn't think his letter was seriously inspired but she gives him a serious and sensible answer nevertheless, in her Sunday Post column.

Atlantic Islands

The National Geographic map this week spans the upper portion of the South Atlantic, showing the west coast of Africa, the islands that fringe that coast, and—not so far away as you might think—the bulge of Brazil. The accompanying article discusses the islands—Azores, Madeiras, Canaries, Cape Verdes—and the jigsaw map of colonies that make up western Africa.

IMPOVERISHED STARS

Poor dears! One of them actually has to skimp along on $500 a month! That's the sad fate of Hollywood's alien stars whose funds have been frozen by Uncle Sam. They're bearing up, though. Sunday's movie article tells about them—Ilona Massey, Michelle Morgan, Jean Gabin, Signe Hasso, Ingrid Bergman—and why they are actually pleased that the Government forbids them to spend their own money!

Other news for theater fans in Sunday's Post: Nelson Bell's column on the surprisingly early opening of the "legit" season, here and in Baltimore. Louella Parsons' account of her lunch with two young starlets, Alexis Smith and Pat Dane. Hedda Hopper's story of famous Hollywood misjudgments about potential stars.

Peace Aims A 'Dead Duck,' Nazis Scoff

By International News Service

Berlin, Aug. 15.—Commenting on the clause in the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration which calls for post-war disarmament of aggressor countries, Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen today defiantly invited the British and American leaders to "come over here and take our weapons away from us."

"If you want to disarm us, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill," a foreign office spokesman said, "come over here and do it. Take our weapons away from us. Just try it."

The government seized on the disarmament clause for propaganda purposes at home and used it to convince the German people that Britain and America are intent on destroying their strength.

"We welcome such frankness as was shown in the Anglo-American declaration," it was stated. "Now all the peoples of Europe are able to see what is awaiting them at the hands of our foe.

"Politically the eight-point program is already a dead duck. The British are frantically stressing that the high seas confab came about on Roosevelt's initiative, a sign they want no responsibility for the consequent catastrophe."

In these quarters the peace aims program was referred to as "an excessive fantasy of ideological exaggeration and arrant impracticability."

"It is a classic example to the European continent," it was said, "why the Axis should win the war."

Commenting on reports that the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting was staged to forestall a German peace offensive, the spokesman said:

"There is no such thing as a peace offensive for the Reich, only military offensives. Destruction of the foe is its first and only principle, no peace before complete victory."

Latin-American Press Acclaims the Declaration

Newspapers in the United States' sister republics to the south yesterday acclaimed the declaration by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

In Argentina, Buenos Aires newspapers applauded the declaration enthusiastically. Said El Mundo, it "should receive the warmest adherence from all men of good will. All governments and peoples of America trust many benefits will come from the two great men who spoke in behalf of two great nations."

To La Nacion it meant that "oppressed peoples of Europe and Asia will find an encouraging word. . . . The oppressors know now what the peace terms are: Turn back the booty and disarm. . . ."

In Colombia, the news pushed national politics out of the front-page spotlight even though this was the day before a presidential convention.

"... document vitally interests Brazil," declared the influential newspaper Imparcial of Rio de Janeiro. "It contains principles we always supported. . . . We anticipate many sections as predictions of a political and social renovation."

Mexico's reaction, swiftly voiced by her foreign minister, was one of complete approval. Words of approbation also came from government officials in Canada and New Zealand.

There was much comment also outside the hemisphere.

In India, the question was raised whether what some called the "new charter of liberty" would be translated into action as far as she is concerned.

In Rome, Fascist circles adopted a contemptuous attitude, saying they did not see how the declaration would disturb the efforts of the Axis powers.

Two points attracted special attention in air-besieged Chungking, the capital of invaded China. They were disarmament of the Axis powers and postwar restoration of self-government to peoples forcibly deprived of it.

guesses that the British premier might visit American shores.

The President's message declared that his party would be composed of Hopkins, Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, his military aide; Capt. John R. Beardall, naval aide, and Admiral Ross T. McIntire, his personal physician.

The President is expected to tell for the first time, in his own words, details of the unprecedented staff talks that brought about a fusion of British and American efforts for defeat of Hitler and announcement of joint peace aims.

Hassett said he presumed that the President would hold a long-awaited press conference when he disembarks. The White House aide added, however, that he would have to confirm this supposition when he sees the Chief Executive.

It was also possible that the President would reveal some of the military, economic and political decisions that he reached with the British statesman.

So far only the eight-point list of peace objectives has been made public, and it is known that at their "several conferences" the two leaders of the Western world and their staffs reached sensational decisions on war policy.

The President was understood to be ready to startle the world once more with unprecedented moves to aid Great Britain, Russia and China.

More than 50 reporters, radio commentators and photographers entrained here tonight for Rockland, a 150-mile journey North, to cover the President's arrival there.

A large crops of press representatives has been patiently waiting in this North Shore resort, while world-shaking events occured on an American cruiser and a British battleship not far off the New England coast.

The President's debarkation will end a 13-day "mystery" cruise that shook the world.

It began August 3 in a complete quiet, when Mr. Roosevelt slipped out of New London, Conn., harbor into Long Island Sound aboard the Potomac for a "vacation."

Newspapers were asked to cooperate in affording the President complete rest on what was to be a "newsless cruise."

Tokyo Press Howls Down 8-Point Plan

By Otto D. Tolischus

Tokyo, Aug. 15.—The eight-point program for the postwar world, proclaimed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill, is flatly repudiated in Japan.

But inasmuch as Japan is highly sensitive to the realities of power which is still in a constant flux, and likewise foresees the necessity of fighting the propagandistic effect of the Anglo-American program with a counter-propaganda, this repudiation is taking various forms.

Official quarters are silent in public because as Koh Ishii, the spokesman of the cabinet board of information explained, the Roosevelt-Churchill statement is so big it requires careful study.

The real Japanese view is voiced with complete frankness in the vernacular press and Domei, the semiofficial news agency, which with unanimity is revealing a common inspiration to denounce the program as a "cunning and tricky plot" to alienate Japan from her European allies, split Japanese public opinion, and to hide preparations for joint Anglo-American military action against Japan.

"Although the eight-point declaration is very vague and high sounding," says Domei, in a summary of opinion attributed to political observers, "it is designed to play an historic role to pull Britain and the United States out of the crisis that is confronting them as the result of the world upheaval." It takes note of the fact that the declaration omits direct mention of the Far East, while crying "Down with Nazism," but believes that this is merely to "alienate Japan and smaller European nations from Nazi Germany." The true import of the declaration, says the agency, "lies in the various measures which are secreted behind the eight-point declaration," which it deduces from the presence of military and naval experts at the sea conference, and which it presumes to be for the "joint Anglo-American strategy of the European war as well as for joint military action against Japan."

Roosevelt, Churchill Invite Parley With Stalin

talism" and make Japan independent of the United States and Britain.

Russia was reported by the Associated Press to be expecting that her position in the post-war world would be discussed at the meeting proposed yesterday, and to be hoping for some agreement in advance on spheres of influence and the future political ideology of western Europe.

The increasing need for material aid, in view of reverses suffered in the Ukraine fighting, was said to be emphasized in Moscow discussions of the situation.

Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of supply, plunged immediately into conferences here yesterday and the new lend-lease program is believed to be nearing readiness for submission to Congress.

Germany continued to voice defiance of the Roosevelt-Churchill program, with one high source saying: "If the so-called democracies want Germany disarmed, let them come and get our arms."

What additional fighting fronts Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill contemplated was a matter of speculation, though most observers took the reference as a warning that Japan might attempt further encroachments in the South Pacific. Possibility of an outbreak in the Near East, where many German troops are massed opposite Turkey, also was mentioned, along with some discussion of whether Britain contemplated thrusts designed to distract a portion of the German army from its Russian campaign.

The close intertwining of American, British and Soviet efforts for the "destruction of Nazi tyranny," indicated by reference to "our common effort" in the message to Stalin, brought home again the extent to which Mr. Roosevelt is determined to utilize American resources against Hitler.

Both abroad and here there were reports that the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences had assigned chiefly to this country the guarding of the status quo in the Pacific, though there was no indication that Britain was withdrawing any of her military or naval forces from that region.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday expressed hope that Soviet Russia would accept the eight peace points outlined by the American and British leaders. He reiterated that these "were all basic principles which underlie peaceful, just and worthwhile relations between civilized nations."

The third of these eight points, expressing respect for "the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live," was interpreted in some diplomatic quarters as a guarantee that the American and British governments would not try later to upset the soviet system in Russia.

It was taken for granted that Stalin would quickly accept the suggestion for a tri-party conference, delivered to him yesterday by the United States and British Ambassadors.

There was even speculation, reported by the New York Times, that what would amount to a general staff of representatives of the United States, Britain, Russia and China, would be established in Washington to eliminate hitches in allocation of supplies to the various nations warring on the Axis.

The President and the prime minister said they had decided on the message to the Soviet leader after a study of the report of Harry Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, who recently conferred with Stalin in Moscow.

Guesses as to the identities of the "high representatives" who might be sent from this country covered a wide field. Named as possibilities were Vice President Wallace, Hopkins, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, Undersecretary of State Welles, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., priorities director of the OPM; William S. Knudsen, OPM director; Lieut. Col. Philip Faymonville, who has been working on the aid-to-Russia program; Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Force; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and John D. Biggers, Chief of the Production Division of OPM.

Londoners appeared to regard it as a certainty that Lord Beaverbrook and Hopkins would be among the leaders in the delegations.

Meanwhile, critical comment on the Roosevelt-Churchill conversations was heard on the House floor.

Representative Thill (Republican), of Wisconsin, said that if the meeting occurred outside the territorial limits of this country he did not believe the President was acting in his official capacity. Thill said that Congress had enacted a special resolution to permit President Wilson to attend the Versailles conference.

Representative Bradley (Republican), of Michigan, told the House that the Nation may have changed from "a policy of defense of America to offense of Europe—and that means another A. E. F."

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, said that the War Department's decision to build a terminal at Jersey City means that "the boys will soon be on their way."

Reds, Poles Sign Pact

Moscow, Aug. 15 (INS).—A Russo-Polish military agreement was signed tonight providing for formation of a Polish army in Russia to aid the Soviet forces in a planned counter-blitz against the German invaders.

This strengthening of the Eastern Front forces aligned against the armies of Germany and her allies coincided with growing hopes here of early material aid from Britain and the United States.

Text of Note to Stalin on Aid

The joint message from President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to Premier Stalin of Russia, as released by the State Department, follows:

We have taken the opportunity afforded by the consideration of the report of Mr. Harry Hopkins on his return from Moscow to consult together as to how best our two countries can help your country in the splendid defense that you are making against the Nazi attack. We are at the moment cooperating to provide you with the very maximum of supplies that you most urgently need. Already many shiploads have left our shores and more will leave in the immediate future.

We must now turn our minds to the consideration of a more long term policy, since there is still a long and hard path to be traversed before there can be won that complete victory without which our efforts and sacrifices would be wasted.

The war goes on upon many fronts and before it is over there may be further fighting fronts that will be developed. Our resources though immense are limited, and it must become a question as to where and when those resources can best be used to further to the greatest extent our common effort. This applies equally to manufactured war supplies and to raw materials.

The needs and demands of your and our armed services can only be determined in the light of the full knowledge of the many factors which must be taken into consideration in the decisions that we make. In order that all of us may be in a position to arrive at speedy decisions as to the apportionment of our joint resources, we suggest that we prepare for a meeting to be held at Moscow, to which we would send high representatives who could discuss these matters directly with you. If this conference appeals to you, we want you to know that pending the decisions of that conference we shall continue to send supplies and material as rapidly as possible.

We realize fully how vitally important to the defeat of Hitlerism is the brave and steadfast resistance of the Soviet Union and we feel therefore that we must not in any circumstances fail to act quickly and immediately in this matter on planning the program for the future allocation of our joint resources.

Beaverbrook failed to keep engagements at the British Embassy and the State Department. His aides said he felt it more important to get in touch with persons responsible for sending supplies to England.

Among those with whom he sought conferences was William S. Knudsen, director of the OPM.

Beaverbrook also conferred with British officials here in charge of speeding supplies to England. He told reporters that he wanted to learn more about the "bottlenecks" in the armament production program, and that he would give American officials information on how the British had eliminated them.

When President Roosevelt returns, Beaverbrook plans to confer with him. Several important phases of the lease-lend program remain to be worked out, although Beaverbrook attended the historic conference between the President and Prime Minister Churchill on the high seas.

Planes Pound Reds as Vise Closes on Odessa, Nazis Say

Pincers Declared Squeezing Russians All Over Ukraine

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 15.—German military reports tonight described increasing German pressure on Odessa and Nikolaev, with greater use of the air force and "the inevitable closing of numerous pincers" in the great struggle for the Russian Ukraine.

The air force was portrayed in a dual role, harassing Red army troops with whom the Germans were in contact and ranging far ahead to destroy communications and delay Russian retreat.

The withdrawal which the Luftwaffe is seeking to anticipate includes the possibility of escape by ships on the Black Sea.

Bombers claimed extensive damage to a Russian destroyer which was assumed to be preparing to convoy transports off Odessa.

Other concentrated air attacks were reported north of Nikolaev on the estuary of the Bug, where the Germans said tons of bombs wrecked rail lines on both sides of six Soviet troop trains, marooning them.

Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative German commentary, declared all the Ukraine west of the broad Dnieper River was one vast zone of encirclement in which large sections of the southern Red army appeared effectively trapped.

It asserted the German military operations now were proceeding in the usual manner—minor encirclement movements within the larger arena, with the German forces cutting out and dealing with successive small groups of Russians.

The German high command would give no details of the procedure, however.

Elsewhere on the broad German-Russian front, military reports indicated a livening of activity in the Leningrad sector, with the air force again in the spotlight.

Rail lines between Leningrad and Luga and Novgorod were reported bombed, with seven trains smashed and four complete batteries of Russian cannon—36 guns—destroyed. In the course of these operations, 16 Russian planes were reported destroyed.

Paratroop Leader Killed

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—A Rome radio broadcast picked up by N. B. C. said tonight that Berlin had announced the death in action of Lieut. Gen. Sultzman, identified by the Rome radio as commander of Germany's parachute troops.

Reds Battle Blow At Leningrad

somewhere in the Estonian theater of the west.

How these bitter struggles were turning was not stated in the official war bulletin, but the Red air fleet was reported in strong offensive action.

In still another long-familiar area—that about Smolensk on the center before Moscow—violent fighting was in progress, the Red general staff announced.

During the day the Soviet army organ, Red Star, cited the month-long defense of that city, which now is conceded to be in German hands, as having been so costly to the invaders as to destroy their plans for a quick victory and as illustrating a method of Red resistance declared now to be exhausting the German offensive sweep.

Other Soviet informants declared, in fact, that the Germans now have abandoned their attempts to make spectacular advances and instead are attempting no more than gradual advances to nip out only small bits of territory, keeping their front line as straight as possible by dropping the audacious tactic of long salients and sweeping thrusts.

Six Die in Slide At Alaska Quarry

Sitka, Alaska, Aug. 15 (AP).—A roaring 35-foot wall of rock, loosed by a premature explosion, resulted in the deaths of six workmen at a quarry for the big United States Naval Air Base on Japoniski Island, in Sitka Harbor.

A seventh man, H. W. Hagadorn, of Tacoma, Wash., was rescued after he had lain helpless for five hours under a mass of rocks. He suffered only slight head injuries and bruises.

The slide occurred yesterday noon. The construction company declined to release any information on the accident, referring inquiries to the Navy. The Navy gave only meager details.

Hore-Belisha, DeValera Have Talk in Eire

Hore-Belisha, who has been a persistent political foe of Prime Minister Churchill, said after the conference: "I have been privileged to meet a great man. We had a highly interesting conversation, but of course, it was purely private."

3,000 Russians Destroyed, Finns Claim

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Saturday), Aug. 16.—Finnish forces, reinforced by Germans, destroyed three encircled Soviet battalions (a total of about 3000 men) at Tolvajarvi and Aglajarvi after fierce battles in that wild swampy region 50 miles north of Lake Ladoga, Finnish war correspondents reported today.

Last night, in a new push toward Leningrad, Finnish army correspondents reported capture of Karelian Isthmus towns partly encircling Kakisalmi and of Russian withdrawals.

The Finns reported seizure of Kaukola, ten miles west of Kakisalmi; Hiitola, 18 miles north of that Lake Ladoga city, and the railway towns of Elisenvaara and Kirvu, on the isthmus between Viipuri and Kakisalmi.

Thus, the Finns said, they had brought Kakisalmi into range of their artillery and expected the early capture of large sections of the railroad running to Leningrad, Russia's second city.

All points listed as captured are in the territory which Finland was forced to cede to Russia in March, 1940.

A Finnish communique stated that a large number of recently completed air fields "intended by the Soviet air force as bases for aggression" had been captured on the Karelian Isthmus and north of Lake Ladoga.

It said also that the latest Russian tanks had been constructed "especially for use on our terrain" and that Russia had built new military roads and railways and reorganized her espionage system with a view to attacking Finland.

Norse Officer In D. C. Tells Of Nazi Terror

"We in Norway have learned by bitter experience the same lessons as the other countries attacked by Hitler," a 24-year-old lieutenant, here on leave from the Norwegian forces in Britain, said yesterday. "We have learned that when it suits them the Nazi gangsters ignore all humane and moral considerations."

STROMHOLT

The boyish-looking young officer, Edmund I. Stromholt, arrived in Washington from Canada yesterday morning for a lecture tour of the Middle and Far West under the sponsorship of the Norwegian Information Service.

An infantryman, Stromholt has been in the army ever since he was 18, and has many vivid recollections of the part he played in the defense of his homeland against the German invasion. He served with the Sixth Norwegian division, which handed the Nazi legions their first defeat of the war when it recaptured the city of Narvik.

He related first-hand accounts of the German army's use of native women and children as shields in their advance through Norway, and told of Gestapo terror methods used in trying to keep reports of the practice from leaking out of the country.

However, he added, the Norse people still utilize every chance they can to sabotage the Hitler rule in their country.

"The Germans are masters in Norway today," he said, "but they also are made to realize that it is not all honey to act as oppressors to a freedom-loving people."

Lieut. Stromholt has been on duty in a British training camp in Scotland, learning antiaircraft methods, he said.

French People to Be Punished For Red Riots, Nazis Warn

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Aug. 15.—Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, commander of the German armed forces in France, proclaimed today that the whole population of occupied France and not merely the guilty themselves would be held responsible for outbreaks attributed to Communists.

The proclamation, which followed upon the publication yesterday of news of shooting and fighting "by Communists and Jews" in the streets of occupied Paris, was the first application of the theory of total responsibility on such a scale.

[Whole towns in the Netherlands have been fined. Last December the newspaper Depeche de Tours reported that the population of Orleans, in the occupied zone of France, had been fined one million francs after a German telephone wire was cut.]

Death Threatened

Gen. Von Stuelpnagel's order:

"The French Communist Party having been dissolved, all Communist activity in France is forbidden.

"Any person who carries out Communist activity, who carires out propaganda or who tries to—in brief anyone who supports in any manner whatsoever Communist activity—is an enemy of Germany.

"Those guilty are subject to the penalty of death, which will be pronounced by a German court-martial.

"Any person finding himself in possession of an anti-German tract must hand it immediately over to the nearest German military service. Violators will be punished by a penalty up to 15 years at forced labor.

"I count on the wisdom and good sense of the population for everyone to contribute to preventing irresponsible elements from supporting the enemies of Germany.

"I warn you against the grave results which follow the attitude of hostile Communist circles, not only for the guilty themselves but also for the entire population of the occupied territories."

Another German announcement required that all property held by people who ever resided in Soviet Russia be reported to the military authorities before September 1.

A third measure established German control over a large proportion of released French prisoners of war—who technically are "out on parole." They must now report to the Germans every three months.

In Nice yesterday two men and a woman were blown to bits in the Albert I Park, apparently by the premature explosion of a suitcase bomb. Nice, however, is in unoccupied France.

Prison Camp Formed

London Raid Anniversary Passes Quietly

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Aug. 16.—The anniversary of the first German bombing of London, the attack on Croydon Airdrome by dive bombers August 15, 1940, passed without the blast of a single bomb or the drone of a single Nazi plane over the capital.

In fact, at midnight, the only incident reported throughout the British Isles was the dropping of bombs in East Anglia by a lone German plane which caused neither damage nor casualties.

It was different one year ago.

Then the Germans were sending hundreds of planes over to attempt to blast the R. A. F. out of the skies and smash air fields as an apparent prelude to an invasion which has never materialized.

About 6 p. m. on August 15, the Luftwaffe swooped in over London, blasted a factory and hangars at Croydon, and smashed up a number of dwellings and departed as the outnumbered R. A. F. gave chase.

144 Attackers Downed

Warnings sounded throughout the London area, although the raiders did not then try to penetrate beyond the suburbs. One hundred and forty-four of the attackers were listed on the official tally as destroyed that day, however.

But coastal dwellers who one year ago were watching massed German bomber formations roar inland are now listening to the sound of outbound British planes raiding Germany and German-held territory.

Meanwhile the air ministry, hitherto wary of revealing the number of planes participating in raids on Germany, announced that more than 300 R. A. F. bombers had flown over the Reich early yesterday in heavy moonlight attacks on Hanover, Brunswick and Magdeburg.

Moscow Raiders Dispersed

Moscow (Saturday), Aug. 16 (AP).—German planes attempted to raid Moscow during the night, but an official announcement said all craft of the small attacking force were dispersed and prevented from reaching the city.

Russians Bomb Berlin

Berlin (Saturday), Aug. 16 (AP).—Red air fleet bombers sent residents of Berlin to shelters last night during an air attack on the capital of the Reich and communities in northeastern and eastern Germany.

Plenty of antiaircraft fire was heard in Berlin during the alarm, but there was no sound of bomb explosions in the center of the city.

Stalin's Son Cited For Heroic Action Against Germans

Moscow, Saturday, Aug. 16 (AP).—The army journal, Red Star, cited Premier Joseph Stalin's son, Jacob Djugashivili, today for heroic action against the Germans by staying at his post "until he used his last shell."

(The Germans announced recently the capture of Stalin's son, a lieutenant of artillery.)

"An amazing example of genuine heroism and devotion to the fatherland," it said, "was set in the battles for Vitebsk by the commander of an artillery battery, Jacob Djugashivili.

"In a fierce battle annihilating the enemy he did not leave his post until he had used his last shell."

Nazis Shell Ships In Dover Straits

Folkestone, England, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—German long range guns on the French coast shelled British ships in the Straits of Dover for almost an hour tonight, firing two-gun salvoes almost every minute.

Guns at Cap Gris Nez ended their bombardment with a four-gun salvo and a few minutes later the battery at Calais fired two shells. Crowds gathered on the cliffs at Folkestone and Dover to watch the action.

Two small ships in the channel scurried to port with shells exploding around them, but they arrived apparently untouched.

Mist Thwarts Raid On Chungking Area

Chungking, China, Aug. 15 (AP).—An attempt by Japanese airmen to open a second straight week of bombing this capital was frustrated this morning by mist blanketing the Chungking area. While no bombs fell, the city was kept under an air-raid alarm for 55 minutes.

The Japanese unloaded explosives on other points in Szechwan Province where the weather was favorable.

Program Urged To Help Men Army Rejects

Copyright by New York Times

Because more than 40 per cent of examined men are being classified as unfit for general military service, an "alarming" percentage, the commission on physical rehabilitation yesterday recommended a Government-financed voluntary physical rehabilitation program for rejected selectees.

The commission reported to Paul McNutt, Federal Security administrator, that it was recommending a voluntary program because it had been authoritatively informed that the Army would maintain its present high physical standards of eligibility and would not undertake rehabilitation.

Approving the commission's report, McNutt declared today that the proportion of registrants rejected because of physical defects was rather alarming in view of the extraordinary demand which the overall defense program is making upon the manpower of the country.

Reservoir Disappointing

"The inevitable conclusion is," he said, "that our reservoir of physically qualified manpower is disappointing."

The administrator pointed out that "while this program is directed primarily toward making more men available for military service it has far greater implications on the future public health of the country, particularly in relation to the opportunities for the replacement of these registrants into civilian pursuits after the emergency is over."

The report of the commission, which is headed by Dr. George Baehr, of Columbia University, declared that 'the alternative to such a voluntary program is lower physical standards of eligibility for Selective Service and compulsory physical rehabilitation after induction into the Army. Action is required along the lines of one or the other of these alternatives for the present standards of physical eligibility have reduced the Nation's reservoir of eligible registrants to a number far lower than had been anticipated."

Members of Board

Besides Dr. Baehr the commission comprises: Dr. Arthur W. Allen, chief, east surgical service, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston; Dr. Frederic A. Besley, professor of surgery, Northwestern University Medical School, Waukegan, Ill.; Dr. Channing Frothingham, chief of medical service, Faulkner Hospital, Boston; Dr. Harry S. Gradle, chief of staff, Illinois Eye and Ear Infirmary, Chicago; Dr. John J. O'Rourke, dean, dental school, Louisville, Ky., and Dr. M. T. MacEarchern, associate director, American College of Surgeons, Chicago.

The commission reports that to enable States and local communities to estimate the cost of a rehabilitation program it will be necessary to require physicians or Selective Service and Army induction boards to state where the physical handicap responsible fo rclassification I-B or IV-F is remediable. The diagnosis recorded upon the records of registrations now classified as I-B or IV-F give little indication of the possibilities for complete or partial correction. A special classification of remediable cases as I B-R and IV F-R would act as an incentive to voluntary correction of remediable physical handicaps.

Nazis Send Out Nude Women To Distract Soviets in Battle

Moscow, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Germany is sending nude women to distract Russian troops in battle, a dispatch from the front said today.

It said an Alpine Division, presumably in Finland, brought hundreds of camp followers from Hamburg. During a recent battle, the women, naked, waded into a river defended by the Russian troops. German soldiers, depending on the women to divert the Russians' attention, attempted a crossing simultaneously at another part of the stream.

The dispatch said the Russians "were not fooled."

Vichy Jails Profiteers

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Aug. 15.—As an indication of measures to come it is announced today that 34 profiteers have been interned in pursuance of Marshal Petain's message of last Tuesday indicating protection for the consumer. Official statements stress the fact that these men held important positions and that henceforth penalties would be meted out to big fish as well as small fry.

This action seems to herald a round-up of middlemen who under the system introduced by Jean Achard, the recently "resigned" minister of supplies, were authorized to act as distributors while continuing to carry on their own trade.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 15 (AP).—A reliable neutral observer just arrived in Cairo from the Balkans reported tonight that three attempts have been made to assassinate King Boris of Bulgaria since the Germans invaded Russia.

'Blitz' Leader Ready

London, Aug. 15 (AP).—Food Minister Lord Woolton announced today that Britain's "shadow larder," including five million cans of various foods, was ready.

He said Prime Minister Churchill had instructed him to have all emergency arrangements ready by September 1, the date the prime minister has given as the zero hour for a possible invasion attempt by the Germans.

Preparations have been made to deal with conditions that might arise in event of invasion by sea or air in any part of the country and for dealing with "the most severe blitz our most pessimistic imagination could devise," Lord Woolton said.

Parran Calls For 50,000 Trained Nurses

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service, called yesterday for 50,000 young women to begin training this fall for professional nursing careers in order to "avert serious damage to the Nation's health during the present emergency." The young women must be "well educated," Dr. Parran said.

This large number of students is needed to meet the tremendous demand for graduate registered nurses as a result of the national defense program, Dr. Parran said. Student nurses actually contribute valuable service soon after entering schools of nursing and thus would relieve more staff nurses in civilian hospitals to assume defense duties, he pointed out.

The States' relation division of the Public Health Service, under Dr. Parran's direction, is administering a recent Congressional appropriation of $1,250,000 which will facilitate the training of these additional nurses.

"Young women of America are faced with a serious challenge to serve their country during the present national emergency," said Dr. Parran. "An acute shortage of professional nurses exists today. It is imperative that we keep abreast our military and civilian nursing requirements."

In addition to recruiting more student nurses, it was said, thousands of registered graduate nurses are being mobilized for total national defense.

The American Red Cross also is conducting an enrollment campaign for its first reserve, official reservoir of nurses for the Army and Navy, and at present has an enrollment of 20,549. Approximately 1000 nurses are enrolling each month in the first reserve, but Red Cross officials plan to increase this number to 1500 soon.

Clipper Group Reports Seeing Subs Off Bermuda

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Passengers arriving today on the Pan American Atlantic clipper reported they sighted two unidentified submarines between Horta, the Azores, and Bermuda.

"We were about 400 miles west of Horta," a passenger who declined to identify himself said, "and it was just dusk when we saw the submarines. One was about 3 miles behind the other. The first submarine was about to submerge and only the conning tower of the other was visible above water.

"They immediately submerged as we approached, and we could see no identifying marks. All we could see thereafter was the wake of the submarines."

The clipper brought 23 passengers from Lisbon, 28 from Bermuda, and 3124 pounds of mail.

Evangelist Once Played With Orioles

Businessman-Evangelist David C. Butcher, who in the nineties was in professional baseball, is "going to bat" for Christianity at a revival here.

Close friend of Clark Griffith, Washington Senators' owner, Butcher is speaking daily at 7:45 p. m. through August 24 under a huge tent at Wisconsin Avenue and Calvert Street Northwest under the auspices of the Interdenominational Laymen's Association.

Butcher, converted to Christianity 8 years ago, founded a brick construction contracting firm 25 years ago which has handled much of the Mall building work. Now a Baltimorean, he has preached in 57 cities in 47 States since his conversion.

He said he probably would have continued his diamond career if a speed-ball pitcher on the old Baltimore Orioles hadn't put his wrist out of commission.

Participating in the revival are Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute; William C. Bond, jr., chairman of the Interdenominational Laymen's Association, and the Northwestern Chapel Trio, that includes Mrs. Parks Hunt, Lurlene Wood and Barilyn Cookson. They are accompanied by Parks Hunt, cornetist.

Movie Stars Find Answer In Religion

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 16.—Hollywood, says Dr. Daniel A. Poling, is still far from deserving a halo, but the voice of religion is finding more listeners among motion picture people than ever before.

Returning by plane from the film capital, where he talked with Ann Sheridan, Bette Davis, Frederic March and Martha Scott, among others, the president of the world's Christian Endeavor Union said he found many film stars and executives "serious and conscientious artists."

Dr. Poling was one of a committee of six clergymen, headed by the Right Rev. James Freeman, bishop of Washington, D. C., who aided in keeping the depiction of a protestant clergyman's career authentic and natural in a forthcoming picture.

Technicians and sound men as well as actors and actresses were interviewed by Dr. Poling on their feeling toward religion, and he said he felt a marked change in the general attitude of many.

"I don't want to speak for any star or any Hollywood worker in particular," he asserted. "But I think I can speak for nearly all of them in saying that they believe we've come to a time when religion has the answer. If religion isn't the answer, there is no answer. That's the way Hollywood leans."

Mission Annex Cornerstone Will Be Laid Wednesday

Washington religious and civic leaders on Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. will help lay the cornerstone for Central Union Mission's $142,000 John S. Bennett Memorial Annex—a tribute to one who guided the mission's destinies for 22 years.

Wielding the silver trowel used in the stone laying for the present building at 613 C Street Northwest in 1924 will be Mrs. Jean Bennett, mission superintendent since her husband's death in 1937, and W. W. Everett, sr., vice president of Woodward & Lothrop's, and chairman of the financial drive for the annex.

Edward H. DeGroot, jr., president of the mission's board of directors for 19 years, will deliver the principal address. Other participants will include Mrs. W. H. Ramsey, president of the Mission Women's Guild; Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the Mission Evening Auxiliary; William H. Ramsey, mission board vice president, and Dr. Freeley Rohrer, stated clerk of the Washington City Presbytery.

The new building, which is expected to be finished in time for the mission's fifty-seventh anniversary celebration on October 25 and 26, will provide 110 free beds. It will supply more space for children needing temporary care in the Children's Emergency Home of the mission.

Central Union Mission had its inception in 1884, in the home of a Mrs. La Fetra, behind the Temple Cafe she operated at 604 Ninth Street Northwest, and was formally organized on August 19 that year at a meeting at the Y. M. C. A.

Many of its earliest services were conducted from a gospel wagon that went down into what was then called the "Swampdoodle" section eastward from the Government Printing Office, and into other underprivileged sections of the city.

The coming of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett to the mission in 1915 signalized a new era of progress for the mission, which always has been supported by Washington churchmen of all denominations. A ministerial council helps supervise its program.

In addition to providing for the material and spiritual welfare of thousands of transients annually, the mission carries on an extensive program for needy children, through its Emergency Home and through Camp Bennett. The mission's annual budget is more than $50,000.

Daily Services At Cathedral Attract Many

During the last few months it has been noted that an increasing number of people are attending the daily services at Washington Cathedral, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the cathedral and Bishop Coadjutor of Maryland, reports.

The services, quiet and brief, are conducted every morning at 7:30 o'clock in Bethlehem Chapel, and at noon and 4 p. m. in St. Mary's Chapel.

Dean Powell attributes the interest in the week-day services to the stress of the times. "Many out-of-town visitors come to see the beauties of the cathedral and stay over for the services. More and more Washington residents are making a point of attending two or three services a week. From many of these people I have heard that the few moments of quiet enjoyed at the cathedral have brought great comfort in these distressing times," the dean says.

The daily services next week will be conducted by the Rev. Theodore O. Wedel, canon chancellor and director of studies of the College of Preachers, and Canon Curtis Draper, jr.

Dr. Wedel will preach at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. The Rev. Charles Wood, assistant rector of St. Paul's, Rock Creek, will be in the pulpit at 4 p. m.

"SUNSET AND EVENING STAR"
— — — ALFRED TENNYSON — — —
Sunset and ev'ning star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Not All Selects To Be Held, Thomas Says

By the Associated Press

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, floor manager for the Congressionally approved service extension legislation, said yesterday that a substantial number of men might be released from the Army before serving the 18 additional months provided under the measure.

Under the legislation, the President is authorized to order an additional 18 months for "any or all" of the selectees, reservists, National Guardsmen and Regular enlisted men. The President could order an extension of less than 18 months if he so desired.

Some Sufficiently Trained

Thomas told reporters it was unlikely that the Chief Executive would issue a blanket order continuing all of the three-year enlisted personnel for 18 months.

"There will be a certain group which will be sufficiently trained and ready for release," Thomas said. "These should be placed in the reserves in order that new men may be trained."

The Utah senator said this group to be released would consist largely of men who had no special skills. He said it was likely that all technicians and men with specialized knowledge would be retained.

In some cases, Thomas declared, men who are ordered to remain in service for an additional 18 months may be released before that period is up if the Army commanders decide they are sufficiently trained and the President authorizes their release.

Act Awaits Signature

The draft extension measure, approved finally by a Senate vote of 37 to 19 yesterday, now awaits Mr. Roosevelt's certain signature.

Legislation to lower the maximum draft age from 35 to 28 also awaits signing and unless Mr. Roosevelt signs or vetoes it by next Monday will become law without his signature.

War Secretary Addresses Troops

peditionary forces for the benefit of other nations."

In his outline of defense strategy, Stimson told of air and naval bases being built in Alaska. The present attack of Germany on Russia, who has always been a peaceful neighbor of ours in the Pacific, he said, now brings out into sharp prominence the importance of these outposts.

"Japanese newspapers are already beginning to tell us the trouble we may expect to have in Alaska if Germany conquers Russia."

The Secretary of War declared that critics of the Government have not studied the development of modern weapons nor shown sufficient vision to realize the "possible military and political" changes when they say that creation of America's present Army was not necessary.

A successful attack on any of America's outposts would bring an enemy within bombing distance of American cities and would make necessary a major military effort to drive him off, Stimson said.

It is because such a major military effort may be needed, the Secretary of War said, that America's Army is being built—a need which would be infinitely greater should Britain receive a mortal blow.

For such an eventuality, America must be able to match the skill and power of the German army, which can "hardly be overestimated," said the Secretary.

"You young men know the difference between a professional team and even the best of amateurs. The Germans today have reached the standards of professionals and veterans. They have set a standard which we must excel. We must be ready to meet such an attack as this on any of the many and varied terrains which surround our country from which an attack may come."

We wish an army, said Stimson, that will be able to meet and conquer any attack. "We believe that given the training and the weapons, an American Army, actuated by the spirit of free men, will be more than a match for any similar army composed of men who are not free."

The address was broadcast over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. and Mutual Broadcasting System.

weapons to meet any emergency" made the $1,347,000,000 funds for reserve orders essential to the defense program, he stated.

The value of the equipment to be ordered from the ordnance fund has been repeatedly demonstrated in the present war, Stimson emphasized. He cited the necessity for antiaircraft guns of "the highest possible ceiling," available in greater quantity than previous appropriations could provide. Lessons of the war also prove that "the density of antitank guns in all organizations and echelons must be increased," he said.

Restoration to the bill of 750-million dollars of the ordnance fund sought by Stimson brought to $4,253,267,863 the Army's share of the latest defense appropriation bill. The funds are to be used to order a wide variety of "critical items" for a three-million-man Army.

The bill caries $1,574,466,755 for the Navy, to be used chiefly for expansion of naval shipbuilding facilities and radio and shore bases, $668,000,000 for the Maritime Commission and $49,383,500 for various civil activities.

Contractual authority of one billion dollars for the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission also is provided by the legislation.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee which originally eliminated the $1,347,000,000 ordnance item from the bill, said yesterday he still believed the cut was justified but had agreed to restoration of 750 million dollars because "the parliamentary situation in the House required it."

ing shortage that will hamper our defense efforts."

Declaring that "Mr. Hitler, and Mr. Hitler alone, is to blame for the scarcity," Ickes explained that tankers formerly used to bring Gulf Coast oil to the Atlantic ports had to be diverted to supply England with gasoline, "without which England cannot hope to defeat Hitler and maintain its own liberty."

"Our ability to maintain our own liberty is inextricably linked with the hope of England to defeat Hitler. So we had no choice . . ."

Ickes said many tankers had been diverted and frankly declared that "many more will have to be."

The oil coordinator added that the rapidly developing shortage in the heavily industrialized Atlantic Coast States would gravely jeopardize our defense efforts and that in view of continued and increasing consumption above the amounts being supplied "in recent weeks we have been narrowing our margin of safety."

Ickes estimated that loadings of Gulf Coast gasoline were 22 per cent below East Coast sales in the last four weeks.

Prospects for the future, the coordinator freely admitted, are not bright.

"Tankers and pipelines cannot be built overnight," he said. "In fact, no great amount of relief can be expected for a good many months."

Enough for Defense

He issued assurances, however, that the tankers still remaining in domestic service can supply defense, Navy and air force needs.

"But they cannot do these things and, at the same time, keep millions of automobiles going on pleasure rounds," he concluded.

The unprecedented peacetime action, expected to affect 11 million, or one-third of the nation's motorists, was seen last night as still falling short of the steps which ultimately must be taken, particularly in the light of Ickes' figures that consumption is exceeding deliveries by 22 per cent.

The future steps, it was observed, may be still further cuts in deliveries to retail gasoline vendors, and, eventually, a strict ration card system may be set up.

John Dressler, president of the New Jersey Gasoline Retailers Association, expressed the opinion in Hackensack that motor fuel dealers in that State would reduce their average sales to each customer to conform to the order.

"Our average sales run about 8 gallons a day to a customer," he said. "We would reduce our average sales to 4 or 5 gallons. The intelligent dealer would do that to retain as many customer contacts as possible."

A Texas Co. official, who asked his name be withheld, said to sell gas "proportionately" involved a situation where the majority of gallonage is sold during the rush hours of 7 to 9 in the morning and between 4 and 7 p. m.

Even if some ratio of sales by the hour was worked out, the official said, a filling station operator could hardly refuse to sell to a customer on the plea he had reached his hourly quota, without hurting his business.

Ray Avey, manager of Capital Service Station, 1145 Bladensburg Road Northeast, bespoke the sentiment of a cross-section of filling station operators when he said he was baffled by the "proportionate" clause and would await some clarification of the order before he would know how to comply with it.

Gallonage sales here range from a few hundred gallons a day at small stations to 5000 to 6000 at the largest. The majority sell between 1000 and 2000 gallons, it was reported.

1-Hour Downpour Halts Pittsburgh Traffic, Business

Pittsburgh, Aug. 15 (AP).—Traffic and business in the Pittsburgh district virtually was paralyzed today by the heaviest one-hour rainfall in Weather Bureau history.

An inch and nine-tenths of rain fell between 10 and 11 a. m. Stranded motorists, street car riders and pedestrians were forced to wade through waist high water deep in some sections of the city. Counties collieries were flooded and the Pittsburgh Railways Co. reported trolleys blocked at 26 different points.

was so swift that even its sponsor was surprised.

"The thought never entered my mind on Tuesday, when I introduced the bill, that it would be considered by the House before the week was out," said Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, the measure's author.

The bill was engrossed quickly and sent over to the Senate, where Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Deficiency Appropriations Subcommittee, agreed to poll the group in order to bring the measure onto the Senate floor before adjournment.

A canvass of the membership of the full Appropriations Committee, however, disclosed that of its 23 members, only 16 were in the city. Before the drive to strengthen the police force was begun members of the committee were assured that no major business would be transacted in their absence, so the bulk of the absentees was not expected to return.

"We are very anxious to get this bill through, but it looks now as though we would have to wait two weeks," Adams said.

Action was "Impelled"

In reporting the Cochran bill to appropriate $152,000 from District revenues for additional police salaries, the Appropriations Committee declared itself "impelled" by the findings of a recent investigation of the department. The investigation was headed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

"The regrettable increase in the number of heinous offenses that have occurred in the past few months has contributed weightily to the committee's decision on this bill," the report added.

The committee declared that it "is aware of the fact that mere addition of numbers does not remedy many of the matters set forth in the special report of the Schulte subcommittee."

"Much of the improvement desired can only be accomplished by administrative action," the committee stated, adding its confidence in the "experience, capacity and integrity" of Acting Police Chief Edward J. Kelly.

"He has a most difficult task and at the same time an unusual opportunity to render an effective and patriotic service to the Capital of the Nation," the report stated.

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, asked Woodrum how many of the police to be added "will be sent out to detect the heinous crime of parking overtime?"

"The police department has got to get up to date," declared Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee.

"It (the department) has got to get into the frame of mind to go to the FBI school. Unless it does that and reorganizes the setup and gets some pep, we are not going to get results."

Schulte promised the House it would see police suspensions "by the wholesale," while Woodrum declared that the crime situation in Washington "is such that any well-trained, courageous police force could handle the situation."

With a force of 1819 men which the addition would provide, Washington will have one of the largest departments, per capita, in the Nation, said Woodrum.

Action Deferred On New Airport Liquor License

Jurisdictional control of the new National Airport at Gravelly Point was again left up in the air yesterday when the Commissioners deferred action on application for a District liquor license at the terminal building.

Guy Mason, only lawyer-member of the Board of Commissioners, said he wanted further time to study legal phases of the controversy.

Commissioners Young and Kutz already have accepted a ruling by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech holding that "all or a substantial part" of the airport property is within the District.

His opinion was challenged by Virginia authorities and the liquor license application was then returned to the Commissioners by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Plane Parts Strike Heads Enlarged List

A strike of 1,500 workmen whose failure to turn out crankshafts may cause the shutdown of operations at the Pratt & Whitney aircraft factory, and a stubborn work stoppage affecting vital tank parts yesterday headed a suddenly enlarged list of defense strikes causing Government officials grave concern.

Meantime, solution of the biggest defense stoppage, involving almost half a billion dollars of naval and Maritime Commission construction at the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearny, N. J., appeared to await return to Washington of President Roosevelt. He is expected to sign an executive order authorizing Navy occupation of the yards and permitting a return to work of the 17,000 strikers.

Korndorff May Yield

However, other informed sources said it was possible that L. H. Korndorff, company president, might agree instead to accept a Defense Mediation Board recommendation for ending the dispute. Korndorff concluded conferences here yesterday with Washington officials, and left for New York. On Monday, he offered to turn the plant over to the Navy.

The strike, which may affect Pratt & Whitney operations, involved 1,500 C. I. O. steel workers at the Leland Gifford Co., Worcester, Mass., who walked out in protest against alleged discriminatory discharges. The company supplies the aircraft concern with crankshafts.

Tank part production has been stopped since Monday at the Mack Truck Co., Allentown, Pa., where 4,000 workers joined a strike sponsored by the C. I. O.-United Auto Workers to force retroactive wage increases following reclassification of employment categories.

Defense officials confirmed a recent Army report that strikes had lately risen to about 25 in number, but they discounted the seriousness, from an urgent defense viewpoint, of all but four or five.

Only Few Serious

A settlement was reported yesterday of a dispute which threatened operations at three New York City yards of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, and affected 11,000 men. C. I. O. marine construction workers agreed to a Labor Board election to decide the issue of a collective bargaining agency with A. F. of L. teamsters.

On other labor fronts, a United States conciliator sought to avert a threatened strike of telephone installation men which union leaders said might eventually tie up every Bell telephone system in the country.

Halifax Praises Work of Purvis, Killed in Crash

The announcement on Thursday of the death of the Right Honorable Arthur B. Purvis, British supply council head in North America, in a plane crash at a British airdrome, yesterday brought forth a statement from Lord Halifax praising Purvis' work and mourning his loss.

"Arthur Purvis has died in active service in the execution of his duty," the statement read, "and only those who worked most closely with him can measure the loss that his death means to the work for which he most truly gave his life. For months past he has been the linchpin of the vast organization built up on this side to cooperate with the United States Administration in vital matters of production and supply. And each month that passed showed more plainly the immense contribution that his rare qualities of head and heart enable him to make. I scarcely know how we can hope to fill his place. I mourn his loss as a counselor of exceptional wisdom and, along with all others who knew him, as a valued friend."

Africa to Share More Abundant Life, Attlee Says

London, Aug. 15 (AP).—Maj. Clement R. Attlee, lord privy seal, told West African students in London today that the Roosevelt-Churchill principles applied to all races.

"I look forward," he said, "to an ever-increasing measure of self-government in Africa and for an ever-rising standard of life for all the people of Africa.

"We in the Labor Party have always been conscious of the wrongs done by the white races to races with darker skins. We have been glad to see how with the passing years the old conception of colonies as places inhabited by inferior people whose only function was to serve and produce wealth for the benefit of other people has made way for more just and nobler ideas."

Sabotage Hint Follows Loss Of 3 Log Rafts

By the Associated Press

Cathlamet, Wash., Aug. 15.—The strange destruction of three log rafts, containing 15,000,000 board feet of lumber for national defense, has given rise to ominous but unverified suspicions in this little Columbia River City.

The rafts burned or disintegrated at sea within the past year in a way still unexplained. The Benson Lumber Co. has announced discontinuance of its 35-year-old practice of having the huge, cigar-shaped rafts towed 1,300 miles to its mill in San Diego, Calif.

In all that time, only three other rafts, of a total of about 120, ever broke apart.

Last September, fire broke out on a raft off the California coast. Only part of it ever reached the mill. In July of this year, a raft broke up off the Golden Gate. Early this month the third raft caught fire and burned or ruined 90 per cent of the timber.

The rafts are 1,000 feet long, extend 30 feet below and 15 feet above water, and, with their heavy binding chains, are valued at about $150,000 each.

Seven veteran employes construct the seagoing log piles here. The Benson company has absolute confidence in their loyalty, and so has the tug towboat company in its crews.

The rafts carry lights at each end—but the last one caught fire in the middle. The 1500-foot tow-line between the rafts and the boat is deemed too long to attribute the flames to the tug's sparks. Lumber company officials discount the theory that friction is to blame.

There seems but one suspicion left—that a chemical has been deposited on the rafts, to be ignited either by the hot sun or contact with water. But when the last raft left, Benson officials inspected every cranny, even followed it several miles offshore.

Wickard Acts To Speed 1c Milk

Must Show Surplus

A city, to be eligible for the children's aid project, must show a "sufficient" surplus of fluid milk and cream. C. I. Dunn, milk marketing administrator, declared yesterday that the city's supply is plentiful at present. It would be considerably increased with passage of the Schulte-McCarran bill opening the local markets to Midwest sellers.

Wickard's order also provides that there must be competitive bidding by dairies wishing to supply the penny half-pints. This system is now followed by the District in purchasing milk for its institutions and for the free school lunches, the latter project conducted jointly with WPA.

There must also be a written application to participate. Such an application, submitted by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, has been awaiting action by the Surplus Marketing Administration's dairy division for more than two months.

No. 7 says "the school milk program cannot be put into effect in any area, school or institution if the normal consumption of milk is a a level which precludes an increase in consumption by more than 50 per cent.

D. C. Passes Requirement

Washington passes this requirement easily. An outside estimate is that 37 per cent of the Capital's public school children consume some milk in school, whether it is paid for or given free. There are many schools in which less than one-fifth of the public drink milk.

Finally, the Secretary of Agriculture has provided that no school or institution may participate in which less than 65 per cent of the enrollment fall within one or more of the following categories:

(1) Children receiving public or private relief; (2) children from families receiving public or private relief; (3) children from families receiving work relief, or supported by a person employed as a relief worker on a WPA project; (4) children from families whose income falls within the lowest third income group.

Accompanying his application for establishment of a 1-cent milk program here, Dr. Ballou transmitted a tentative list of approximately 40 elementary schools, with a combined enrollment of approximately 15,000.

Therapy Units to Meet

With "defense uppermost" the American Occupational Therapy Association will hold its twenty-fifth annual meeting here September 1-5, in conjunction with the American Congress of Physical Therapy, it was announced yesterday.

Daylight-Time Plan Gains Favor

favor of extending daylight time—if adopted here—throughout the winter months. This, they pointed out, would reduce electricity consumption by permitting workers to leave office buildings before it became necessary to turn on lights.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said he would not oppose legislation giving the District "fast time."

"I should be disposed," he said, "to follow the judgment of the District Commissioners and the people."

McCormack Favors It

Majority House Floor Leader John McCormack, of Massachusetts, voiced strong approval of the plan.

"I think it would be a good thing," he said, "in view of the need to conserve power for national defense industries."

He said it was a "shame" the District couldn't have a representative in Congress to keep that body in touch with things just like this.

Of the four local citizens' association, four queried yesterday split 50-50 in their opinions on daylight-saving time. The secretary and public celebrations chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations both went on record in favor of the fast time.

Robert J. Hellmuth, president of the Anacostia Citizens Association, and Godfrey L. Munter, head of the Chevy Chase group, both approved setting the clocks ahead an hour, though they said that their associations had taken no official action on the question.

"Personally, I'm heartily in favor of daylight-saving time," Hellmuth said, "and I have been for a long time. I like the long evenings for recreation or for working around the house and the garden."

However, David W. Gabelein, president of the Chillum Heights Citizens Association, and L. M. Leisenring, president of the Dupont Circle Association, took an opposite stand.

"I always get an hour less sleep when daylight is in force," Gabelein complained. "But seriously, whenever it has been tried here before it hasn't worked, and has just resulted in confusion. I don't think it's a good idea."

Leisenring said that his organization had voted against the new time at a May meeting, and added that his personal feelings were about the same. He said it seemed "rather late in the year to start it now."

Chamber Urges 'Withholding' Tax on Payrolls

By the Associated Press

Taxation of all wages and salaries, dividends and interest at their source was proposed to the Senate Finance Committee yesterday by the United States Chamber of Commerce as one means of boosting Federal revenues by $4,500,000,000 annually.

Estimated yield of the House-approved tax bill has been placed at $3,236,700,000 by the Treasury.

Urging revisions to reach "the bulk of consumption expenditures in the lower brackets of income," Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the chamber's Federal Finance Committee, estimated that a 3 per cent "withhholding tax would yield at least $2,000,000,000 in additional revenues.

For other new revenue, he proposed additional sales, excise or miscellaneous taxes to raise $1,000,000,000 and an increase in existing corporate and individual income taxes to raise an additional $1,500,000,000. The House bill would bring in an estimated $2,400,000,000 additional from income taxes.

Cut in Spending Urged

Advocating also a two billion dollar slash in annual nondefense spending, the witness said this would mean a total improvement of $6,500,000,000 a year in the Treasury's financial position.

Alvord was one of three chamber witnesses who contended that the pending bill would place too great an additional burden on some seven million individuals now paying the bulk of income, estate and gift taxes, while not levying enough new imposts on persons with smaller incomes.

Fred R. Fairchild, Yale University economist and a member of the Chamber's finance committee, said that 15 per cent of the population would bear most of the new tax burden under the House bill, although the other 85 per cent would receive a "very large portion" of the increased national income under the defense program.

Burden on Firms

A contention that the excess profits tax provisions voted by the House would put a "discriminatory and inequitably heavy tax burden on those companies that are least able to carry it" was made before the committee by John Cowles, president of the Minneapolis Star, Journal & Tribune Co.

Such companies, he said, were those with a proportionately large amount of debt and which also had small or no earnings during the 1936-1939 base period, thereby forcing them to use return on invested capital as the measure of their normal profits.

He urged that companies using invested capital for computing excess profits be allowed to earn 8 per cent on borrowed capital as well as equity capital, instead of being limited to one-half the difference between the interest rate paid and 8 per cent.

Mrs. Fones Fund Raised to $439.86 By Post Readers

Post readers yesterday boosted to $439.86 their fund for Mrs. Rose Fones, a widow of 416 Third Street Northwest, who early this month was robbed of her life savings of $1167.

The previously announced total was $431.86.

Mrs. Fones, who had placed her savings under a mattress in the belief that she safely could keep it that way until a really "rainy day" came, will celebrate her seventy-fourth birthday next Friday. With announcement on August 4 that her savings had been stolen, many readers called The Post inquiring if they could help her. The fund was started.

It is planned to deliver the money to the aged woman at her home on her birthday. She has promised to place it in a bank.

Thomas Again Heads C. I. O. Auto Union

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 15.—R. J. Thomas, a former welder who has guided the U. A. W.-C. I. O. for three and a half years, was reelected president of the organization today after he pleaded for unity and an end to factional strife.

With only a few delegates dissenting, the United Automobile Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers at their sixth National Convention adopted a motion unanimously electing Thomas to the post he has held since January, 1939, when Homer Martin was ousted by the executive board.

George F. Addes, of Detroit, secretary-treasurer since 1936, also was reelected, defeating Richard T. Leonard, Detroit regional director, by an unofficial vote of 1,759 to 1,307.

Before the election was held, Thomas pleaded to the delegates "to stop fighting."

"I'm not trying to take any middle-of-the-road position," he said. "I'm telling you what I think is best for the union. We can't go on fighting, we have got to stop or we won't have a union. And I'm saying this to both sides—you've got to stop fighting.

"What happens to me is not important—what is more important is whether we are to have a union."

Thomas declared he thought "there are two groups at this convention" and added "I have not been aligned with either.

"I said when first elected in Cleveland that I'd do all I possibly could to bring all groups together. I tried, but I must have failed. But I say to the groups who are fair-minded that they should not allow any one group to control this convention. I've heard one side and then the other side condemn each other. I've been condemned, Addes has been condemned."

Earlier the convention, which last night voted to exclude Communists, Fascists and Nazi members and sympathizers from holding any elective or appointive office in the union, defeated a motion to expunge from the record details of the roll call ballot, showing how each member voted.

Adventists Confer at Takoma Park

Leaders of Seventh Day Adventist educational institutions in this country are meeting at the General Conference headquarters, Takoma Park, for their fourth annual council. It will close August 24.

Sessions composed of round table discussions and research work begin daily with devotional services led by the Rev. Harvey A. Morrison, head of the conference's educational department.

Delegates attending the convention are heads of the music, economics, home economics and commerce departments of various colleges and junior colleges. Each year different department leaders are called to the session. It takes four years before each department is represented.

The chairmen include Prof. J. W. Osborn, of the music department of Pacific Union College at Angwing, Calif.; Prof. F. W. Tymeson, of the department of commerce and economics at Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., and Miss May Stanley, Adventist counsel, of the home economics department at Union College, Lincoln, Nebr.

Other schools represented are Atlantic Union College, South Lancaster, Mass., Emanuel Missionary College, Berrien Springs, Mich.; Walla Walla College, College Place, Wash., La Sierra College, Arlington, Calif.; Southeastern Junior College, Keene, Tex., and Southern Junior College, Collegedale, Tenn.

Rains Postpone Rockville Carnival

Heavy rains last night forced postponement of the opening night of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department carnival on the old fairgrounds at Rockville. Fire Chief W. Valentine Wilson announced that the opening will be held tonight instead.

The carnival is an annual event that has somewhat taken the place of the old Rockville Fair, which attracted the countryfolk for more than three-quarters of a century. The Rockville department collects no tax funds and finances its activities largely through the carnival, which will continue until August 23. The carnival is attended by county residents from all over the rural sections and has been attaining a large representation from the suburban sections in recent years.

The carnival under the auspices of the Takoma-Silver Spring chapter, Izaak Walton League, which has been conducted nightly since Monday at the rear of the Silver Spring Armory, Wayne Avenue and Pershing Drive, will close today at midnight.

Jack Murrill is general chairman, assisted by George Richardson and Skeets Buffin.

House Group Asks Bridges' Deportation

The House Immigration Committee approved yesterday a bill directing the Attorney General to take into custody and deport Harry R. Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader.

A similar bill was passed by the House last year, but the Senate failed to act on it. The bill terms Bridges' presence in this country "hurtful" and seeks his deportation to Australia.

Dr. MacDonald to Speak

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District Coroner, will participate in a round-table discussion at the National Association of Coroners' annual convention in Chicago, September 16, it was announced yesterday. "How To Improve the Standards and Modernize the Coroner's Office" will be the topic.

Desertion From Duty

After ten days of open hearings on the emergency price-control bill the House Banking and Currency Committee has taken a 30-day recess from its labors and members are getting ready to go home for a while. Chairman Steagall says that this action was "in no sense an attempt of anybody to filibuster the proposed legislation." If it was not, then the committee members are deplorably lacking in understanding of the need for haste. Price Administrator Henderson has repeatedly stressed the importance of acting promptly to combat the rapidly mounting cost of living before prices get completely out of bounds. His opening statement before the committee made it very plain that the country has already proceeded dangerously far along the road of inflation that we traveled in World War I with such disastrous after-results. The longer we delay taking decisive action to curb inflationary tendencies the harder it will be to prevent an endless spiraling of prices that in the long run would benefit nobody—labor least of all.

It is true, as one member of the committee said, that very careful study of price-control bills is essential, because the power to set prices vests tremendous power in the official called upon to administer the system. That fact makes it all the more imperative for the committee to resume its tasks and stay on the job continuously until it is finished. By running away, members will lay themselves open to severe and deserved criticism for dilatory handling of emergency legislation that brooks of no delay.

36 Acres Of Roof

One argument appears to have won the approval of the Senate for the proposed 36-acre building to house 40,000 War Department employes in Arlington. The Army had asked for the structure as a means of enhancing its efficiency. Its employes here now occupy 17 different buildings. The Army would like to have them all under one roof, even if its personnel should be expanded to wartime proportions. Like the House, the Senate simply voted to grant that request. All other considerations, however momentous, were brushed aside.

Everyone recognizes the urgent need of the War Department for new headquarters larger than the structure recently built for it on Virginia Avenue. But is it not possible that the convenience of having 40,000 persons working in one building has been grossly exaggerated? The proposed three-story structure would cover 36 acres or more. From one end to the other would be a long walk. Communication between different parts of the building would not be facilitated by elevators. Unless the War Department plans to experiment with roller skates for employes or inside trolley cars, the time spent in walking through this "largest building in the world" might seriously cut down the estimated gains in efficiency. When such an enormous number of persons is being accommodated, in other words, several buildings separated by streets may be a convenience rather than a handicap.

President Roosevelt clearly saw the difficulties of too much concentration in building when he urged that the size of the project be cut in half. A structure to accommodate even 20,000 persons on the site of the old Arlington experimental farm would be a questionable compromise. But at least it would greatly minimize the danger of making a ghastly blunder that Congress and the War Department as well may always regret.

The decision to locate the building outside of the District was made only because a majority of the Senators present were convinced that there is no site within the Capital suitable for such an immense acreage of stone and concrete. But it is an indisputable fact that plenty of sites could be found for smaller buildings. So if the proposal to erect a single building for nearly twice as many employes as the War Department has at present is a mistake, the site as well as the architectural plan ought to be reconsidered. Certainly a building to house one of the chief executive departments should not be located outside of the Capital, except for some compelling reason.

It is impossible to avoid the belief that Congress has been maneuvered into an unwise decision by the emergency circumstances under which this project has been considered. Unfortunately, President Roosevelt cannot veto the bill without delaying an enormous defense appropriation. Still those who are concerned over the future of Washington as a great Capital hope that the President, on his return, will be able to work out some compromise whereby a costly mistake can be avoided.

Crisis At Home

The country has suddenly become aware of the serious plight of thousands of business concerns without defense orders, which are facing shutdowns for want of raw materials to fill nondefense orders. Not all firms in this position are small, but in the majority of cases it is the little businessman whose existence is threatened by the prior claims of the defense program. Donald M. Nelson, director of OPM's division of purchases, has done what he could to encourage a wider distribution of defense orders among smaller companies. But under pressure to obtain maximum results within a limited time, the Army and Navy have been virtually compelled to deal with large concerns that could be counted upon to produce goods without undue delay. That did not matter so much as long as nondefense orders kept the small manufacturers busy. But growing shortages of raw materials resulting in priority orders for defense purposes are now forcing plant shutdowns and throwing thousands out of work. Leon Henderson has estimated that two million workers will lose their jobs temporarily due to defense dislocations, and some OPM experts believe that the figure will run considerably higher.

A number of steps can be taken to alleviate the hardships of small business concerns. Mr. Knudsen suggests, for instance, that the armed services must actively promote subcontracting as part of the procurement program. They should also be willing to deal with entire industries through a representative of the group and to break up large contracts into smaller ones. However, solution of the problem presented by idle plants and idle workers does not always lie in a shift to defense work. Essential goods and services have to be provided for the civilian population, and it is as much a part of the defense program to see that these basic needs are satisfied as to provide munitions for the Army and Navy. Vigorous prosecution of defense efforts would be impossible without maintenance of civilian health and morale. Moreover, the national interest calls for the survival of small business units and discouragement of the trend toward industrial concentration. It would be perilous, indeed, to ignore the plight of small manufacturers forced to shut down for lack of supplies.

But unless the President moves quickly to reform the administrative setup for defense the outlook for many small business firms will undoubtedly become increasingly gloomy. The situation emphasizes the crying need for centralizing responsibility for defense planning so that scarce supplies can be allocated for both defense and civilian use and a proper balance between the two can be maintained. Discussion of what ought to be done is less important than the designation of some one to do it. It is reported that Judge Samuel Rosenman, at President Roosevelt's request, is working out a plan for setting up a single policy-making body that would prevent agencies such as OPM's Priorities Division and OPACS from working at cross-purposes. His findings will be awaited with great interest, and it is to be hoped that they will be thoroughgoing. Mere tinkering with the present uncoordinated control machinery will not resolve the conflicts that are largely responsible for the acuteness of the approaching domestic crisis.

What Aid To Moscow?

It is announced that Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill are seeking to arrange a conference among Josef Stalin and his military advisers and "high British and American officials." Among the matters to be discussed are the strategical situation of the Red armies in eastern Europe and Siberia, assistance to Russia in the form of arms and supplies, and postwar plans with respect to "spheres of influence and the future political ideology of western Europe." Just how much basis, if any, this report has we do not know; it is attributed only to "London sources," which might mean everything or nothing. But it was passed by the British censor, who might have withheld it.

In any event, the reference to "future political ideology" is interesting and even significant, since it bears on a problem which up to now has had little discussion. Comrade Stalin and Red Russia are, of course, outright allies of Great Britain, hence implicit allies of the United States; but it must already be obvious both to Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt that Russian communism still offers a great potential obstacle to any reconstruction of Europe and any plan of permanent peace. It has been demonstrated again and again that Communist propaganda outside Russia is not guided by any constant principle, even the revolutionary principle, but solely by the shifting exigencies of Soviet foreign policy.

We find a striking example of this in the almost complete cessation of Communist-inspired strikes in defense industries in the United States. Again there is reason to believe that underground Communist activity is playing some part—but how large a part it is impossible to guess—in the increasing unrest and sabotage in the countries occupied by the Nazis. Nevertheless, a great factor in the collapse of France, and perhaps also of the Low Countries, was the defeatist propaganda so zealously spread by European Communists in the months of the Hitler-Stalin honeymoon.

The systematic looting of the occupied countries, the degradation of the conquered peoples and the deliberately fostered antagonisms among various elements of the populations, must by this time have produced a social climate quite favorable not only to revolt but also to revolution, once Hitler is overthrown. This the Communists well might be tempted to encourage and exploit to their own advantage, which would almost certainly lead western Europe into the sort of frightful civil wars that beset central and eastern Europe after 1918. It would automatically void the pledge of a peace that will permit "all men in all lands" to "live out their lives in freedom from fear and want."

Thus aiding Russia to resist the utterly unprovoked Nazi invasion is one thing, but aiding the Communists to make an ideological conquest of postwar Europe would be quite another thing. Indeed, not to take steps now to insure Europe against such a conquest would be the blindest of follies. As to material aid to Stalin, it was pointed out on this page six days after Hitler had launched his invasions that any aid to Britain is ipso facto aid to Russia, and that, considering the well-nigh insuperable problem of delivery, we can best aid Russia by redoubling aid to her ally. We see no reason to modify that conclusion.

Price Fixers

In the months since the Department of Justice began its inquiry into food prices it has obtained more than a score of indictments charging violations of antitrust statutes and other laws. This is an impressive display of vigilance, serving fair warning on the food industries that price-fixing arrangements are subject to minute scrutiny. Some time ago 24 defendants were charged with conspiracy to fix hog and sheep prices. This week 118 defendants were indicted on charges of conspiring to fix the price of ham. The latter defendants include 81 meat-packing companies with plants in some 30 States. By their alleged conspiracy, it is claimed, they were able during the Easter season to push up the retail price of ham by 7 cents a pound. Such a practice obviously places an unfair burden on the consumer. In this period of emergency when the cost of living is going up there is a special obligation on the Antitrust Division to protect the public against artificially fixed prices.

But it is interesting to note that the Department of Agriculture has been promoting higher prices for beef and pork while the Department of Justice has been pursuing its trust-busting campaign with the ultimate view of keeping retail meat prices down. Logically, if packers must pay more to livestock growers, they will have to pass along increased costs to consumers. Of course, the higher costs which the packers pay in no way justify conspiracies to fix prices. But it is evident that so long as the Agriculture Department pursues its price-stimulation policy, consumers will have to pay more for their meat regardless of how vigilant the trust busters may be. The inescapable fact is that the Government itself is our leading price fixer.

WITCH'S DAUGHTER

I love shadows,
And deep, black water,
For I am a dark thing
A witch's daughter.

Red, laughing roses
Kissed by a bee,
Waters filled with sunlight,
What are they to me?

These things I treasure:
A ragged, black cat,
An old black kettle,
A vampire bat.

What is morning's shining,
Blossoms sweet and white?
I prefer the nightshade,
I prefer the night.

Witch-light, and elf-light,
And owl-faced moon,
And an old black thorn-tree
Dancing to a tune.

Atlantic Conference

Was ever falling dud guilty of a softer thud? That Joint-Decision heralded with all the effort of extraordinary exaggeration proved to be mildly exasperating.

"The mountain labored" will never more be used as typical of gigantic effort resulting in minute product. Rather will we hear of the thundering ocean bearing on its bosom the burdens of mankind, to be analyzed, studied and finally remedied by the leaders of the "Democracies" who sought refuge from the noise of conflict in the hold of a battleship defying turbulent tides.

Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Sealer, was chosen to announce the new birth. 'Twas a good choice, evidently a gentleman of refinement, devoid of force, recited his little piece with perfectly detached voice, as he might have reported the arrival of twins, if such had been expected to any of the ladies of the Government.

"The question of supplies has been fully examined." Could anything more innocuous have been invented?

There was nothing Churchillian about that piece of paper. Platitudes, from the L. of N., to aggressor nations, from the rights of people to establish their own form of government, to the hopes for universal happiness by unrestricted trade, all platitudes of hope based on virtue, to be practiced by the weak under the eye of the strong.

Not a word of recognition of present conditions. Blind to traitorous France, a stinging threat to the world; ignoring the advance of Hitler crossing the Caucassus on his way to Iran and India; no promise of physical force to stop the onward rush of his murderous hordes, a pleasant tea party with a little caviar to humor Stalin with the loss of Odessa. We had been promised a battleship launching, to discover instead a catamaran.

College Course

Would it not be a good idea to make military training a regular part of college courses for young men, beginning with the fall of 1941 and extending for at least the duration of this emergency?

By making military training compulsory during college, it would mean that these young men could be called into service if and when needed without spending 2½ or more years as draftees. It would serve the double purpose of allowing them to continue with their normal plans for education and, at the same time, be prepared physically to enter military service, having learned the fundamentals of military training. I believe most young men who might be affected would prefer such a plan to the possible interruption in their careers for drafted service.

The hours of military training might well be outside of regular classroom hours; for instance, from rising time in the morning of 5:45 to 9:30 o'clock, with college classes covering the major part of the day until 3 or 3:30 o'clock and military training again from 4 to 4:30 o'clock until normal military retiring time.

Labor Bonuses

If labor and management will get together and put into effect an incentive bonus system, the defense effort will run much more smoothly. Under such a plan, labor will recieve cash benefits for working efficiently and willingly. At present labor is working principally for the stockholders. This plan could well be utilized by aircraft manufacturers where great amounts of detail work are involved.

Hours For Sleep

Have we no sense of reason and lost all manner of judging which and what is best?

It seems so when daylight saving is thought of when winter is soon to be upon us, and the mornings stay dark much longer.

In the hot summer time all have a hard time to get off to sleep on account of the heat, and it's nearly midnight before one can do so. Then, if and when the hours are set ahead, where are the hours to be found for sleep? Just aren't, that's all. Let well enough alone, I say.

Why Fight?

What would we be fighting for? That's what the American people want to know. It's not our war. Why should we send a million of our boys overseas for a war that we didn't start and we want no part of? Why should we kill off the best youth in the land just to settle a border dispute in France or Greece or Lithuania?

Would we be fighting for a little fence in Alsace-Lorraine or a plot of land in Bukovina? Would our part be to avenge a battleship sunk or a few sailors killed? If now, what is the underlying cause of a damaging war over there.

No, it's not the little fence in Alsace or the plot of land in Bukovina. It's more than that—a lot more than that. It's the common decent rights of civilized man. It's everybody's birthright. It's freedom. The right to live as we like, not dictated to by anyone, large or small. We don't want to be in their war, but it's grown into more than just their war. When the rights of free men everywhere are threatened, it's time to act even if it is over there. The right of freedom and decency knows no color, creed, or nationality.

So when they say: "Why should we fight their wars?"—just remember "the land of the free and the home of the brave." We want to keep it that way.

No aggrandizement, no territorial changes imposed by force, disarmament of aggressive nations, are the inspired history making commitments of our country in her joint pledge with Britain to save civilization. Risk of Waiting

What shall we do about Thailand and silk and oil? If we brought matters to a head through all-out economic pressure and blockade, might not the Japanese navy simply remain in port and keep our fleet dangling in the Pacific "indefinitely"? Is that the trap into which Hitler wants Japan to lure us? Don't believe it! Japan is in no position to stand a blockade "indefinitely." Fight or "hole up", the result would be the speedy elimination of the Japanese threat to our life line of rubber, tin, tungsten, etc. from the Orient.

But suppose we rely on diplomacy and Japan agrees to withdraw from the Axis, with or without Hitler's secret consent. Suppose, also, that Hitler then becomes dominant in Europe and Russia; offers Manchuria, China and the Philippines to Japan. How long would our treaty stand in the way of a Japanese reentry into the Axis?

Thus, always providing that our strategical experts approve, and disregarding our radio Quislings, it seems that the time has come to take bold steps in the Pacific.

If we temporize until Russia and China are knocked out, the same psychology will keep us on the sidelines until England is crippled and Churchill falls. Then, we shall have a two-ocean war with a one-ocean navy. And against terrific odds!

A dispersal of forces when you have three allies is nothing compared to a dispersal of forces when you have none. That is what every American knows we risk with every day of inaction, unless he has been doped with soothing honey from Berlin. The risk of waiting is more terrible than the risk of immediate hostilities.

Far East Policy

I believe the great majority of Americans, isolationists or nonsolitary, agree that Hitler ought to get a sound thrashing, our help in money and material doing a big share of the job.

But I am confused at the idea of our becoming involved in a war with Japan resulting in our defeating that bellicose people at the expenditure of great effort, loss of money, men, ships, and getting what in return?

To my mind it would be magnificent for Hitler to see us wasting our strength on Japan. How he would rejoice at the loss of American ships. On the radio, in the paper, definite statements have been made that Sumner Welles made suggestions to the Japanese Ambassador looking to a settlement of all differences between the two countries, based on Japan quitting the Axis. It seemed to those with whom I talked that the idea had much merit. Now Secretary Hull denies all such reports. Why didn't the newsmen ask Sumner Welles for the facts in the story? Is it true that the State Department is divided on Japan's case?

If disunity prevails at headquarters how are we to have a united people to crush Hitler, the curse of this world? Welles should speak up to clear the record.

The Post Impressionist

Big Broadcast

The grotesqueries of chance juxtapositions to which the radio is peculiarly liable occasionally achieve the classic. One such occurred some months ago when an N. B. C. stand-by orchestra filled a 15-minute interval awaiting commencement of a speech broadcast by Adolf Hitler. Just as Hitler went on the air the orchestra concluded "You Grow Sweeter as the Years Go By." Thursday morning this previous high for its category was topped by the combined efforts of a C. B. S. commercial and our perennially precedent shattering President.

The preliminaries are frequently more full of fight and fury than the main event. When the prelim boys are heavyweighs on the way up, the pace and performance, if not the purse, all too often surpass those of the big bout.

Radio is a precocious heavyweight. It may have grown too fast but it grew. It may lack the power punch of the press but it is lightning fast and a killer. Beneath its suave habiliments, its size makes it rough and rowdy, its youth, exuberant.

In the Hippodrome of the Titans, the Tired Old Champ and the Fanatic Challenger were fighting and feinting grimly for their—and my—all. Between rounds the Tired Old Champ had gone into conference with his Second (Who-Soon-May-Surplace-Him).

For a week one could surmise the general outcome of that presumed conference; forever none will know all the particulars. For pleasure I picked the under-cover clouting of radio's heavyweights for the privilege of purveying news of the Olympians' corner conference.

Though press and microphone may commit lese majeste on the world of minor men, they tread carefully in certain quarters for reasons painfully obvious. No chartered planes would swoop at this ostensible fishing yacht, neither steward nor sparks was bribable. Those private pipelines, "authoritative circles," and "confidential sources" were dry as dust and the mouths applied to them. There were no strings to pull, no leaks to drain. The haystack's needle would have succumbed in moments to the search and scrutiny to which the Nation was submitted; its seclusion in Washington would have been too brief for second-splitting.

As editions and newscasts passed in sterile succession, the nature of the inevitable news became more negatively obvious; that nature, more grimly positive. The gangling Gargantua became my private circus maximus.

Wednesday evening's report of an important announcement to be made Thursday morning reverberated like the ninth round's closing gong in a ten-round fight where there had been no fighting and the purse was no picayune. Midnight announcement that "The White House will have a statement for the press between 8:30 and 9 a. m. at Mr. Early's office" was the bell for the final go.

The 7 a. m. international news roundup (by chance, I heard N. B. C.) brought no news of the one news item of the day. C. B. S.'s commercially sponsored newscast at 7:30 o'clock was equally uninformative. When I cut in again at 8:30 o'clock the dial was still set at C. B. S. and Arthur Godfrey was overlaying a military march with a soto voice, "Any time the network wants in, take it away."

8:31—Interim announcement Godfrey, "As I told you before we're expecting an important announcement at any time now. The minute it comes we'll join the network. Stand by."

8:44:10—Godfrey's signature song ends.

Station identification.

8:44:50—"Hymns of All Churches" program begins.

8:59:30—"We now take you to the C. B. S. newsroom . . . (So C. B. S. hadn't been able to cover?) ". . . now being broadcast from London . . ." (Nope—well, swing the dial—but it makes the sporting gesture.)

9:01:20—London, via N. B. C. Maj. Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, speaks briefly and reads the joint declaration.

9:09:00—Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee "—continuation of the (pause) (pause) principles of the foreign policy of the Government——"

9:10:50—Baukhage commenting.

Within 8 minutes had been polyspherically postulated the eight points for policing and preserving the world. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill had attempted to provide for every eventuality, great and small, but let us concede that chance rather than their personal preference was responsible for arrangement of the C. B. S. commercial program that immediately preceded presentation of their parturience.

Within those 15 minutes were presented four hymns: "O Day of Joy and Gladness," "O Could I Speak the Matchless Words," "Ah Wanna Go to Heaven When Ah Die," "It Is Well With My Soul."

SARDONICUS

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Roosevelt-Churchill Declaration

ALTHOUGH the Axis propaganda is saying that the Eight Point declaration is a revival and imitation of Wilson's Fourteen Points, there is no truth in their description. In fact it can readily be shown that Mr. Roosevelt is so well aware of the lessons of the Wilson era that he has acted consciously to see that the mistakes of the past are not repeated now. As a result there are profound practical differences between this declaration and Wilson's.

LIPPMANN

THE DIFFERENCE, which makes all the difference in the world, is that here we have a joint public declaration by the heads of the two governments whereas Wilson's declaration was a unilaterial statement. This declaration is a binding commitment upon the Churchill government and the Roosevelt Administration whereas Wilson's declaration was binding only on Wilson. The Fourteen Points were Wilson's own statement of the aims he would pursue; they were not negotiated by Mr. Wilson with Mr. Lloyd George or any of the other Allied leaders, as this declaration has been negotiated by Mr. Roosevelt with Mr. Churchill. The Fourteen Points, though they were announced in January, 1918, were never officially discussed with the Allied governments until after Germany had asked for an armistice in October, 1918. Thus, whereas President Roosevelt has an agreement with the British government, President Wilson had only a public statement of his own aspirations. Until the week of the Armistice itself, and then only after they had made drastic reservations, Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando were in no sense committed to the Wilson program.

As a matter of fact they were very much committed to a violation of the Wilson program by a series of secret treaties which had been signed before the American intervention. There was a treaty between France and Czarist Russia which called for the dismemberment of western Germany and of Turkey. There was a treaty between the Allies and Italy fixing the territory which Italy was to have as a bribe for participating in the war. There were other treaties affecting the Middle East and the Far East. President Wilson became fully aware of these treaties only in November, 1917, when they were published to the world by the Bolsheviks. The Fourteen Points were prepared soon thereafter and were carefully designed to offset the worst features of these secret treaties. But President Wilson was never able to induce the Allies to abrogate the treaties and accept instead his Fourteen Points. Thus at the peace conference there was continual conflict and compromise between the secret commitments of the treaties and the Wilson declaration.

TODAY we not only have a joint declaration and a public agreement such as Wilson never achieved until it was too late, but we know that the public agreement has been possible because in fact there can be no secret agreements which cross it. We know this because no matter how skeptical and suspicious we choose to be, Great Britain in this war has no allies with whom disconcerting secret agreements could be made.

Obviously there is none this time with Vichy France or with Italy, which is an enemy, or with Japan, which is in the other camp, or with any of the governments-in-exile. As for Soviet Russia, the terms of the British-Soviet alliance, of the Polish-Soviet treaty, and of the declarations to Turkey, are in all respects consistent with the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration. There is not the faintest shadow of a reason for supposing that either Britain or the United States has any commitment which conflicts with their joint and public agreement.

BUT this declaration differs from the Fourteen Points not only in that it is a commitment, and not merely a unilateral statement, not only in that in this war there is no coalition of great powers which is held together by profitable secret treaties. This declaration places its main emphasis on the very thing which, because it was neglected 23 years ago, made the whole settlement unworkable and the postwar reconstruction a failure. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill know that a stable peace is utterly inconceivable unless it is organized around the continuing collaboration of Britain and America. They know that there can be no end to this crisis if the English-speaking peoples do not work in closest understanding, and no possibility of a free and ordered world in the future unless they provide a nucleus of order around which the liberated peoples can rally.

Thus the fact that this declaration was made in what was in reality a grand council of war gives it a meaning far beyond anything that the words in themselves could express. After all, there are many combinations of words by which one might express, though always inadequately, the determination of civilized men to survive an onslaught of barbarism which is the most terrible and the most formidable in many centuries. What matters is the will to achieve what the words attempt to convey and the means to make good what they promise. The historic circumstances under which this agreement has been made are the seals which bind it.

IT will be said by his critics that the President has exceeded his powers in committing this country to a collaboration which extends beyond this war into the postwar world. They are mistaken. He has, indeed, made a great commitment, but so did President Monroe, when, after negotiations with Great Britain, he committed the young and feeble republic to the defense of the Western Hemisphere against the allied absolutisms of Europe. The action of Monroe was audacious to the point of recklessness. Yet it was right in its concerns of the American interests, right in the basic understanding of the fact that this interest could be maintained because in essentials the British interest was the same. Because it was rightly conceived and rightly founded in the realities of world politics, the Monroe Doctrine, which began as a Presidential declaration, has stood the test of time and is universally accepted, even by men who, if they had had to vote on it when first presented, would surely have objected violently.

This joint declaration, because of the practical and necessary collaboration which it advertises, will also stand the test of time and come to be universally accepted in this country. For there is no turning away from the fact that the independence and the security of the English-speaking peoples requires their close and unbroken collaboration.

Vyazma Next Nazi Goal on Moscow Route

With Smolensk now reported in ruins and behind the German lines, the next strategic goal of the Nazi legions on the direct road to Moscow is Vyazma, the National Geographic Society says. "This vital rail center is about midway between Smolensk and Moscow" continues the bulletin. "The Russian capital lies about 130 miles to the east.

"Apart from its position on the Moscow-western Europe rail line, Vyazma gains added importance as a communications hub because a north-south rail cut-off passes through the city, joining the Moscow-Leningrad train route to the chief Moscow-Ukraine lines. This rail short-cut through Vyazma swings wide to the west of Moscow.

"Vyazma's economic dominance of its region is of long standing: The town has been an active trading center since the eleventh century. The metropolis of an important dairying district, it also does a good business, normally, in grain, flax, and hemp seed. The city, with about 25,000 people, has leather works, match factories and oil presses, and once was famous for a kind of gingerbread.

"In the early days of its history, Vyazma was linked in overland commerce with the Gulf of Finland port of Narva. Captured by the Lithuanians in the fifteenth century, the city fell to the Poles in 1611, who, in turn, lost it to the Russians in 1634."

Stimson's Address to the Army

Secretary Explains The Nation's Peril

The text of the radio address last night by Secretary of War Stimson to the soldiers of the Army follows:

On the request of the President, the Congress has now passed a bill which will extend the period of service for many of the men in the Army. The members of the National Guard and the Officers Reserve Corps as well as the men inducted under the Selective Service Act, who were all originally called for a year's training, under this bill may be retained in the Army for an additional period of not to exceed 18 months.

I realize that this means sacrifice on your part and it is proper that I as head of the War Department should state to you the reasons why it has been found necessary.

An American Army is an intelligent Army. Its discipline is based upon cooperation. It is not an Army hammered into efficiency merely by brute force. It does its work more efficiently if it knows the cause for which it is created and the reason for the sacrifices which it is asked to make.

I also know of the fine spirit which you, the members of this present Army, have already shown and the devotion which you have given to your training thus far, sometimes under very discouraging circumstances. I have been much gratified by what I have learned of your work and conduct. I believe that out of your devotion there is being created the most effective fighting force which this country has ever known in time of peace. Therefore for all these reasons I regard it as a privilege to talk to you today.

In my talk I shall try to describe to you briefly these points: First, the crisis which makes necessary America's present preparation for defense; second, the general principles of our national defense, and third, the vital part which you as the Army must be ready to play in that defense.

In the first place, the world is today facing a situation which is more dangerous to its general peace than any situation which has existed during all the years of recorded history. Three great and powerful nations, Germany, Italy, and Japan, each of them armed with the most modern and destructive weapons, have banded themselves together upon a scheme of conquest against their more peaceful neighbors. Within the past seven years these three nations have successively attacked and conquered some 18 other nations. Germany has conquered Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg, France, Yugoslavia, and Greece. Today she is seeking to conquer Russia. Italy has attacked Ethiopia, Albania, France, and Greece. Japan has attacked China and is now taking possession of French Indo-China.

Opposed to Freedom

Neither Germany, Italy, nor Japan believes in individual freedom within their own borders, nor do they believe in national independence among nations outside of their borders. Their avowed principles are the opposite of those principles of liberty and equality of rights along which the world has been continually progressing for many centuries past. They are seeking to turn back to the customs of the dark ages and they are enforcing upon the nations which have been unfortunate enough to fall under their power, systems of forced labor and subjection which substantially amount to a condition of semislavery.

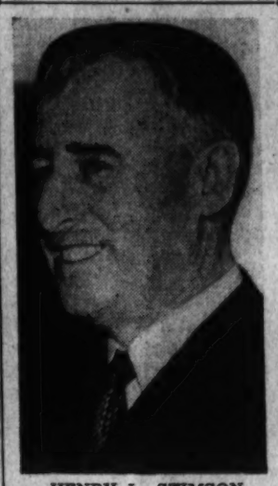
It is hard for us to imagine the United States in such a condition of subjection. But two years ago such a contemplation would have been just as hard for the citizens of France. France had been the leader in the development of freedom in Europe ever since the French revolution 150 years ago. Yet today France is a subject nation. German overlords pull the strings and French puppets dance. France is disarmed. France is policed by foreign secret agents. Free speech is a memory in France. French business has been taken under German direction. Frenchmen are told by foreign rulers when to go to bed and when to get up. French profits, French foodstuffs, French energy, are now going to build up the glory of the German Reich. Children will starve in France this winter and French peasants who reap good crops will live on a crust in order that the German army may be fed. France is a prison house, a thin shadow of a glorious but unprepared nation which failed to see the danger approaching it from across the Rhine. And these conditions of subjection which are now maintained in France are mild in comparison with the brutalities which are being visited upon Poland, Yugoslavia, and Russia.

Nazi Army 11 Million

Today these three Axis nations, Germany, Japan, and Italy, openly announce their intention of going further with their conquest of the world. Indeed they can hardly help themselves from going further. They have made themselves the economic slaves of the hideous system which they have established. For example, Germany with an original population of not more than 70 million is maintaining military, naval, and other armed forces of over 11 million men besides a huge civilian bureaucracy of secret police and other functionaries. Seventy-five per cent of her entire income is going into war, leaving only 25 per cent for all of the needs of her civilian population. She is carrying on her present conquest with the loot of past conquests and with the product of the labor of her enslaved nations. Such a system cannot remain stationary. Germany must obtain further loot by further conquests or else she will begin to slide backward into restlessness, revolt, and failure. And the presence today throughout the Western Hemisphere of German advance agents and Fifth Columnists shows only too clearly one direction in which German future efforts at conquest are likely to go.

Japan is in a similar situation in the Far East. She has an enormous and expensive army spread over northern China. Today she is moving south for further conquests. Her union with the two other Axis powers three years ago was avowedly aimed at us and our interests.

Our own hemisphere, thinly populated, rich beyond all other continents in natural resources, is an inevitable ultimate target for these marauder nations. Today Hitler holds under his domination in Europe nearly 160 million people in addition to the original 70 million of Germany itself. Adding Italy with over 40 million makes a total of over 275 million. If he succeeds in conquering western Russia, he will have under his control 100 million more, or a total of over 370 million. The American government which failed to take measures of protection against such a dire prospect for the future would be faithless indeed to the interests of its people.



HENRY L. STIMSON

Keep War Away

In the second place, what are the general principles which govern our American national defense? The United States and the other 20 republics of this hemisphere have always believed in preserving their isolation as the foundation of their safety. We have had a hemisphere in which for over a century all of the governments have been republican in structure and also independent in fact. We believe in keeping up this system of independence and freedom. For that purpose the Monroe Doctrine has been the cornerstone of our foreign policy. We have recognized that the only safe way to keep America out of war was to keep war away from America. And sometimes we have found it necessary to fight in order to keep war away from our own homes and country.

With the passage of time and the invention of new methods and weapons of warfare this has become more and more difficult. The bombing airplane already has a range of several thousand miles. The development of the Fifth Column has an indefinitely longer range. Each of these hostile weapons may easily become an instrument for the invasion of this hemisphere.

When the full measure of this terrific crisis abroad burst upon us a year ago, our peace-loving country was defended by a one-ocean Navy, a skeleton Army, and a rudimentary air force. The navies and armies of all the other 20 American republics were negligible in size in comparison to the forces abroad. Our own Army was smaller even than the armies of Holland, or Belgium and we saw Holland and Belgium overthrown in a comparatively few days. Therefore, so far as our Army and air force are concerned, we have been obliged to start practically at scratch.

The past year has been spent by our Government in a steady effort to surround the United States with outposts and bastions from which it could be defended against attacks which appear so inevitable. We have commenced building a two-ocean Navy, but the completion of that Navy cannot be accomplished for several years. In the meanwhile we have been endeavoring with all the means in our power to stiffen the resistance of those nations which by fighting the Axis powers were temporarily serving as a protection to us. The principal one of these nations has been Great Britain. The British fleet for many years has been protecting the security of the Atlantic while our own fleet has been in the Pacific.

Leased Seven Outposts

The continuance of this work by the British fleet depends upon the continuance of the safety and independence of the British Isles. Congress last winter enacted the Lease-Lend Act chiefly for the purpose of bolstering up the sturdy resistance which Great Britain was making to the Axis powers. Under this statute we have been able to furnish munitions and supplies to the British Isles and to harbor and repair the British fleet as well as the merchant marine which was carrying our munitions to Great Britain.

In addition to that, we have leased from Great Britain seven important Atlantic outposts to serve as bases to our defense against attacks from the direction of Europe. These bases have been in Newfoundland, in Bermuda, in the Bahamas, in Jamaica, in St. Lucia, in Trinidad, and in British Guiana. In all of these places we are establishing naval and air posts of defense. They are intended to help us keep the navies and air forces of aggressor nations far away from our shores. We are also establishing further outposts in the Atlantic at Greenland and Iceland, and a part of our Navy is patrolling the Atlantic from Greenland southward as an additional protection against hostile forces coming into our Atlantic waters.

If you take your maps, you can see how we have thus been establishing a protective line of defense running from the extreme north in Greenland to the shores of South America by which we are seeking to keep away any aggressive nation from establishing air bases from which they could drop bombs upon the populous cities of our Eastern Seaboard.

In the Pacific we have reinforced our great naval base at Hawaii until we believe that it is now impregnable. We are also building air and naval bases in Alaska and in the Aleutian Islands to keep off attacks from the northwest where our own coast approaches to within 50 miles of the Russian Siberian coast of Asia. The present attack of Germany on Russia, who has always been a peaceful neighbor of ours in the Pacific, now brings out into sharp prominence the importance of these last outposts. Japanese newspapers are already beginning to tell us the trouble we may expect to have in Alaska if Germany conquers Russia.

But the most dangerous avenue of attack against us lies in the south where are situated the friendly but almost unarmed nations of Central and South America. Germany has been pushing into north Africa and we have reason to believe that a major advance will be made by her into that continent. At Dakar, which is held by Vichy forces, now friendly with Germany, the great western bulge of the African coast narrows the South Atlantic Ocean until the distance from Dakar to the easternmost point of Brazil can be easily traversed either by air or sea. The German controlled press of Paris today is openly urging that Germany be invited by Vichy to come into Dakar. We also know that Germany and Japan with their Fifth Columnists and subversive agents have been very active in South and Central America. From our observation of what has happened in Europe, we have learned to recognize the symptons which invariably forecast the coming of a new Axis attack. Today some of the most significant of those symptoms are occurring in South America. Any reader today of the American press can read of unrest and excitement in various South American republics which are being attributed by the governments of those republics to the machinations of foreign secret agents. If, by combining an air attack with a Fifth Column revolution, an Axis power should succeed in making a lodgment upon the coast of South America, we should have a real task indeed: —for it would not be difficult for any enemy lodged there to get within easy bombing distance of the Panama Canal.

From this analysis of our defense you can see that what we have done has not only been absolutely essential to protect us from an ever-approaching and developing danger but that our purpose has been purely defensive. We have not been seeking any wild adventures in foreign wars; we have not been planning any expeditionary forces for the benefit of other nations. We have been simply seeking to make secure our own country and to protect it from a danger that is so real and rapidly growing that a Government which did not take such steps would have been faithless to its trust.

Tells of Future Task

That brings me to my third point, namely the part which you in the Army on land and in the air must be ready to play in that defense.

Critics of your Government have repeatedly asserted that the creation of such an Army as we are now training was unnecessary; that it would be impossible for any of our potential enemies to cross the Atlantic or the Pacific and get at us in the face of our naval power. Such critics apparently have not studied the development of modern weapons; nor have they shown sufficient vision to realize the possible military and political changes which are trembling in the balance in the world around us.

What I have already said will give you the background of the answer to their question. Our Army and its air force must be prepared to meet enemies coming from the north, from the east, from the south, and from the west. It must be prepared to fight on the icebound coasts of the North Atlantic and of the North Pacific as well as in the tropic heat of Panama or South America. American soldiers are already standing guard on the east from Iceland to British Guiana and on the west from Alaska to Panama. A successful attack upon any one of these outposts would bring an enemy within bombing distance of our great cities and would make necessary a major military effort to drive him off.

Cites Power of Axis

But a possible change in the scales of fate might bring our homes into far greater danger. A successful invasion of the British Isles or any other mortal blow to the government of Britain might suddenly deprive us of the protection which is being rendered to us today by the British fleet. That would leave us in a situation where the fleets as well as the shipbuilding capacity of the Axis powers, both at present and still more in the future, would be very much greater than the power of our own fleet and the capacity of our own shipbuilding facilities. Then indeed we would be face to face with a danger which even our isolationists would recognize as the danger of invasion. Such an attack would be no playboy affair. There are veteran troops under the Axis powers on all sides of us. The Germans have a trained army of over seven million men and an air force of over 500,000 men. Japan has today under arms over two million men. They are intelligently led. They are fully armed and equipped. They are most thoroughly trained and their young men have the devoted spirit of fanatics. The Germans are now going into battle with their song, "Today Europe Is Ours; Tomorrow the Whole World." Their skill and their power can hardly be over-estimated. You young men know the difference between a professional team and even the best of amateurs. The Germans today have reached the standard of professionals and veterans. They have set a standard which we must excel. We must be ready to meet such a force as this on any of the many and varied terrains which surround our country from which an attack may come.

These hard inescapable facts constitute the reason why your Government has extended the time of your service and is asking from you every possible effort in the training which we can give you. They are also the reasons why we are asking you to give us the patriotic devotion, the faith, and the spirit which have in past wars made American armies unconquerable. It would not only be a danger to the safety of your country but a crime against your yourselves if we should send you half trained to meet the enemy troops against whom you might be pitted.

We are not seeking to rival the size of these possible enemy forces which surround us. But we wish an army which in equipment, in training, and in spirit, aided by an unsurpassed air force and the full efforts of our Navy, will be able to meet and conquer any attack which may be attempted against any part of our homeland. We believe that you men of the new Army of the United States will be able to do that. We believe that, given the training and the weapons, an American army, actuated by the spirit of free men, will be more than a match for any similar army composed of men who are not free.

Knows Soldiers' Viewpoint

I have served in the Army and I know the soldier's point of view both while in the service and in later life. You may take it from me that your service to the Nation in its hour of need will not be a waste of your time and effort. In the years that lie ahead you will hold your heads high in the thought that you gave honest and faithful service as soldiers when your country called.

Remember that you are the chosen fighting men of the Nation. Others throughout the land are working to supply you with the equipment and the weapons with which you are to act in our defense. But, however earnestly and effectively they may labor, no man who contributes to the common cause only work or money can ever stand on the level of you who are asked to risk life itself for your country and your countrymen.

This Nation was founded in the bond of blood and sacrifice by men who pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor. They reached their goal. Now you men of a new generation are called upon to preserve the freedoms which they so bravely won. To serve in the common defense, for the general welfare, is the first obligation of an American citizen. You will not falter. You can not fail.

Fair Enough

Society Tosses Berry Pie

IT IS all very well to pretend to abhor distinctions, but there are certain types of people whose conduct and manners, say what you will, tend to give a neighborhood a certain name, once they get in. I don't suppose I have to come right out and say what type I mean, do I? Vulgar, noisy, arrogant, horribly ill-mannered and offensively rich. You know the type, surely.

PEGLER

Now, up in Westchester County, in the region of long ridges, leafy valleys, hidden lakes and Long Island Sound shoreline, north of New York, we have been, thank goodness, generally free of this menace, barring a few little alarms. We all realize what might happen to property values if persons of this sort ever should gain a foothold in any number and the country clubs, yacht clubs and beach clubs have been very careful, you may be sure. And one of our strongest bulwarks against undesirables has been the fine social stock of our exclusive suburbs, peopled mainly by very well-to-do brokers, lawyers, industrialists and the like. You can always be sure that they will resolutely and effectively oppose any invasion by the wrong kind, with their raucous ostentation and rudeness.

FORTUNATELY, I say, Westchester County has seemed to attract just the right sort and I know of no more telling way of depicting the restrained but merry fun and jovial good manners of people who bear extreme wealth with grace than to quote for you something from our society column. This little article, written by Miss Patricia Coffin, was carried Wednesday evening, and in citing from it I have the additional purpose of shaming the crass and blatant types who do not know how to behave and always tend to give a resort or neighborhood a bad name.

"SOCIETY Goes Slapstick," is the heading over Miss Coffin's memorandum to the lower orders on an evening of merrymaking by their betters. Then she relates as follows:

"The pie-tossing party which disrupted the routine merrymaking of John Perona's Westchester Bath Club in the wee hours the other a. m., started with a little innocent roll-throwing at Mr. Perona's weekly outdoor barbecue dinner, which was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Dresser, Mr. and Mrs. Putnam Humphrey, Mary Jane Walsh, Woolworth Donahue, Clementine Ballin, Arturo Ramos, Macoco and Orchestra Leader Ernie Holst. Rain early in the evening drove the party into the club, where Mr. Ramos, former husband of Millicent Rogers Balcom, bet Put Humphrey $20 that he could not pyramid three tables and a chair and surmount the pile.

"Put did, whereupon Ramos doused him with seltzer water. Woolie Donahue got a siphon and joined the fray. As a waiter passed bearing a blackberry pie (it is rumored that he was bribed to do so by a spectator), Mrs. Dresser, the former Marion Snowden, seized the confection and hurled it into Ramos' face.

"Ostensibly, she came to the club to sell tickets for the hospital relief futurity race at Belmont Park on the last day of the fall meet, October 4. Her husband won $12,000 on the race last year. After Mr. Ramos had distributed the remains of the pie over his friends' evening clothes, they wound up slipping shaved ice down each other's backs.

"'Good clean fun,' said Host Perona."

IT hardly needs to be said that the Westchester Bath Club is regarded as a very desirable adjunct to the social life of our county and of Greenwich, Conn., close by, from which community it draws not a little of its clientele, because the guests, though rich and hearty, are never vulgar but unfailingly refined, never ill-mannered or noisy, and present at all times the unmistakable signs of that good breeding to which the undesirable type never can aspire. Of course, the undesirable types sometimes do try to imitate their betters when they go out to rejoice by night, but they only succeed in being ill-bred, coarse and offensive.

There is an elegant way and there is a low and vulgar way to squirt a siphon or throw a blackberry pie or smear pie over the evening clothes of a company of merrymakers. Westchester County and Greenwich are fortunate, indeed, in the high quality of their fun-loving mischief-makers, although at Coney Island or in Bridgeport the same aristocrats performing the same pranks might be tossed out of a clam joint or log cabin as wholly undesirable.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Public Had Regarded Petain Regime As Pro-Hitler Before Marshal's Latest Speech

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 15.—As official Washington adjusts its policy toward the Vichy government following Marshal Petain's blunt announcement of fuller "collaboration" with Hitler, results of a Nation-wide public opinion survey show that the average American had already put the Petain regime down as pro-Hitler and anti-British, even before the marshal's latest statement.

In a survey begun the first week in August the Institute asked men and women in all parts of the United States:

"In the war between Britain and Germany, do you think the Vichy government is helping one side rather than the other?"

The question was purposely left open in order to see what net impression the average American had received from Vichy policy.

And the answers indicate that only 4 persons in 100, on the average, felt that Vichy's policy has been guided by an underlying sympathy for Britain, and that only 13 persons in 100, on the average, think Vichy has acted as a neutral.

The majority (58%) said they thought the Petain government had been clearly assisting Hitler.

Think Vichy Helping Hitler	58%
Think Vichy Helping Britain	4
Think Vichy Neutral	13
Undecided or No Opinion	25

The survey has special significance in view of the fact that Marshal Petain went out of his way in his Tuesday address to ask for a "better understanding" on the part of the United States.

The Institute survey found that approximately one person in three was able to identify Gen. Charles de Gaulle correctly as the leader of the Free French forces fighting alongside the British.

Of those who identified De Gaulle, the great majority said they felt he—rather than Marshal Petain's government—reflected the "real opinions" of the French people as a whole.

Ball Game Helps Vandenberg Cut Road Funds $50,000,000

By the Associated Press

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, aided by a baseball game and a scarcity of Senators, yesterday forced a 50-million-dollar slash in a 245-million-dollar defense highway bill.

The measure, which was finally passed and sent to the House, was a substitute for a 320-million-dollar bill vetoed recently by President Roosevelt, and Vandenberg, frequent Administration critic, chided the Democratic majority by begging them "to trust the President."

Aided by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, Vandenberg tied the Senate into a parliamentary snarl for nearly three hours because less than the 49 Senators required to conduct business were present. Vandenberg demanded a 100-million-dollar reduction.

When Senators McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, sponsors of the road measure, and Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, finally agreed to a 50-million-dollar reduction, the measure sped through on a voice vote.

The 195 million dollars would be distributed as follows: 50 million dollars to be allocated among the States for strategic highways, with the Federal Government paying three-fourths of the cost and States one-fourth; 25 million dollars to be used for improving bridges and other highway features and to be allocated by defense officials on the same payment basis; 100 million dollars for access roads to be allocated by the President; 10 million dollars for flight landings for airplanes along highways; 10 million dollars for highway engineering surveys.

President Roosevelt, in vetoing the original 320 million dollar measure, protested allocation of strategic highways on a basis of population and said that 25 million dollars was sufficient for these purposes. McKellar and Hayden, usually ardent Administration supporters, asked the Senate to approve 100 million dollars for division among the States and praised the system under which States match funds voted by the Federal Government.

Vandenberg protested that the measure was "not a roads bill, but a defense bill" and Taft demanded a quorum call.

During the long struggle, the sergeant at arms was thrice ordered to go out and round up a quorum, and Majority Leader Barkley pleaded with Senators to stay in the chamber.

"I realize that the ball game is attractive," he said, "but the transaction of public business is important."

Soldiers May Carry Own Blood In a Vial for Use if Wounded

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 15.—Every United States soldier eventually may carry a vial of his own blood serum tucked away in his knapsack for immediate transfusion in case he's wounded on the battlefield.

It would be bled from his veins beforehand, turned into a light brown powder at Louisiana State University's proposed drying plant, and given back to him in a form weighing only a few ounces.

"Every soldier might be his own donor, inasmuch as his blood, after drying, could be given him to carry in a small container," commented Mr. Urban Maes, director of the L. S. U. medical school's surgery department.

"In this way," he added, "the wounded man could be given not only his blood serum, but also that of his unwounded comrades."

Based on its study of the University of Toronto's laboratories, now quadrupling blood-drying facilities for supplying Great Britain's armed forces, L. S. U. plans a similar plant for its New Orleans medical center—termed ideally strategic by Gov. Sam Jones for fast airplane shipments throughout the Western Hemisphere as well as to United States insular defense bases.

The dried product, reported by Dr. Maes as equally effective as natural blood, is obtained by drying serum separated from blood cells. Cheaper because it lasts indefinitely, the powder merely requires dissolving in sterile water before transfusion.

"Experience in Europe during the present war," Dr. Maes said, "has shown that many deaths from shock, hemorrhage and burns can be prevented by the transfusion of blood. The powder can be readily transported over long distances, won't deteriorate even in tropical climates, nor requires refrigeration for storage."

Widow of British Attache Has Been Living In Montreal in Recent Years; Will Leave Shortly for Lake Placid to Stay With Friends

By Carolyn Bell

Denying rumors of her engagement to a Canadian, Mrs. Mitzi Sims came to town on a flying visit and will be off again shortly to Lake Placid to stay with friends. Mrs. Sims, whose late husband Harold Sims, was attache of the British Embassy here, has been making her home in Montreal for the past few years.

"Headquarters," would probably be a better word, for the lively, Danish-born Mitzi is never in one place very long. Although Montreal is her home now, she spends part of every winter in Nassau, or skiing in the mountains and visiting Washington. Since leaving the Capital last summer she has visited here ten times.

Like just about every woman in warring Canada, Mrs. Sims has been busy, morning, noon and night with Red Cross work. She is an inspector for those "bundles for Britain" that women all over the Western Hemisphere are busy working on. From some of the tales she tells, an inspector is certainly needed. Recently while going through a bundle Mitzi ran across some socks with five toes painstakingly knitted in them! However, she said, on the whole, the products have vastly improved and are increasing steadily. Also just about every other package for the soldiers has a cozy little note tucked away in it.

Mrs. Sims finds Washington vastly different from Montreal, where there is virtually no social life. Since her arrival here finds she has been whisked about to small gatherings which she says "could hardly be called parties—just seeing old friends"—of which she has legion. After her visit to Lake Placid, where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Walters, of Montreal, Mrs. Sims will return to Canada.

Aristedes Mavrides And Wife Here

Visitors—particularly of the refugee variety with fabulous "escape" stories —are becoming an everyday occurrence in this town. Mr. and Mrs. Aristedes Mavrides, she is the sister of Mme. Diamontopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister, arrived here last week and are at the legation for the duration.

Having made their home for many years in Salonika, Mr. and Mrs. Mavrides fled before the German invasion to Athens. When that too became a "hot spot" they went to Crete. When the Crete invasion became a fact they managed to get a boat out but were pursued by German planes. After a perilous journey they managed to get to Alexandria, Egypt, and finally to Cape Town —which is fast becoming another "Lisbon." This African town is teeming with refugees, all with days of misery behind them and an uncertain future before them.

Resembles Sister, Mme. Diamantopoulos

Mme. Mavrides, who is tall and slender with dark eyes, resembles her older sister, Mme. Diamantopoulos. She is fond of walking and finds the peaceful streets of Washington a constant joy. A devotee of simple sports clothes she wears them with a dash. She is looking forward to acquainting herself with America this winter and speaks English with just a trace of an accent.

Mr. Mavrides, who was a director of an industrial company in Salonika, shares his wife's enthusiasm for walking. He also loves to hunt. Both are extremely fond of dogs. They formerly owned a number of pets but because they left Greece in such a hurry were unable to bring any of them along.

Cole–Pancoast Engagement Is Of Interest Here

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of Mr. and Mrs. William Glover Pancoast, of The Evergreens, Woodbury, N. J., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Pancoast, to Ralph Buxton Cole, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Buxton Cole, of this city.

Miss Pancoast was graduated from Marjorie Webster School here. Mr. Cole was graduated from Georgia School of Technology. Mr. Cole, who is with the duPont company, will be transferred to Kankakee, Ill. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

The couple will be married during the Christmas holidays, in Woodbury.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Business Girl, 23, Parents' Mainstay, Resents And Often Profanely Protests Mother's Insistent Interest in Her Affairs; Admits Need of Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have been coping with so many mother-daughter problems recently, perhaps you can help me with mine. I'll paint a picture of myself and let you raw your conclusions. I am 23, I put my share of money into the household, and I claim independence of action. I work pretty hard and go to school on the side. I am usually pretty ill-tempered around the house, I suppose.

I would like to come in and do as I please,—get something to eat, read, play the radio or study, without any fuss. But I have plenty of fuss. I just want to be left alone (I don't have any room of my own); and I get nasty about it, when I have to listen to the neighborhood gossip. I get profane, but it doesn't do any good.

I want to come home when I see fit, drink as I see fit, and to comport myself as I see fit. I think I have sufficiently good judgment in such affairs. But there is a curfew,—about half an hour after midnight. If, once in a great while, I want to stay out until 4:30 a. m. (this happened once and when I got home mother was dressed and sitting in the living room waiting for me), I don't see why I can't.

I know all about the price of staying up late and drinking. I take pretty good care of myself physically, because I cannot afford to get run down. Consequently, I drink very moderately—I mean a limit of three drinks when I go out. On an average, I have a late date once a month. I work late—getting out about 11 p. m., so 2 a. m. doesn't seem an unreasonably late retiring hour to me.

My mother thinks I mistreat her; that I impose on her. When I am out late, she can't sleep; I keep her awake, she says. Once in a while I just stay away from home for a couple of days, spending the night with a girl friend. This doesn't help either. None of my friends is approved. All are said to have an evil influence upon me. When I am home I have to listen to such barbs as, "I guess you got that from So-and-so."

I would like to work out a system whereby what I did was my business; where I wouldn't have to report where I had been, what I had been doing and with whom, and then have to listen to a deluge of abuse, plus such remarks as "Now, you can't tell me that the movies are open after midnight!" Am I wrong in this attitude? (Incidentally, my parents are dependent upon me, so I can't set myself up in my own place.)

R. M.

Mother Needs Love And Understanding

DEAR R. M.: The trouble with your mother is that she is having great difficulty reconciling herself to the fact that you have outgrown the childhood phase of your existence—that, to her, eminently satisfying phase when she was the effortlessly dominant personality and perhaps best beloved center of your social scheme of things. Now that you are more and more engrossed in affairs outside the home, she is unconsciously jealous of those outside interests and of the persons they include or upon whom they center; and concomitantly resentful of your casually indifferent attitude toward her and those topics, activities and preoccupations which are her conversational mainstay.

The suffocating attentiveness to which you are subjected at home (where it is, indeed, unfortunate that you have have no room of your own) is a desperately pathetic, irrepressible yet self-defeating effort on her part to bridge that widening chasm of separateness which she senses is growing between your personality (your mind, spirit and design-for-living) and hers. It is as though she were losing you in a gathering mist,—into which she felt you were wilfully straying, with the intent of eluding her,—and were groping and calling insistently to bring you back to her arms.

It is her misfortune, as well as yours, that her undoubtedly great and sincere love of you should remain on this yearningly possessive (and oppressive) level—instead of enveloping you as freely and effulgently as the glorious sunshine of a cloudless day, so that you would be always warmed by and grateful for it, though scarcely ever consciously aware of it. It is, alas, the rare parent—and perhaps the rare person—who has the noble range of feeling and vision to apprehend that the (shall we say?) estate of loving—of having one's life linked with those upon whom one is privileged generously to confer love—is the greatest essential to soul satisfaction. And that clinging, demanding, "give me first place in your heart" sentimentalism is a soul-constricting affliction to both him who projects it and him who is its object.

However, the solution (insofar as there is a solution) of your problem of harried unhappiness at home, which is occasioned by your mother's obsessive feeling of need to compel or retain some important place in your thought and affections, is not to be found in impatiently spurning her tactlessly insistent overtures, which are sometimes ingratiatingly and other times fretfully or angrily expressed. Rather, it will be found in "treating" her (and I mean in the scientifically healing, as well as generally accepted, sense of the word) with love and understanding,—which thus far you have been callously, even meanly, denying her.

I hold it possible for you to revise your basic attitude toward her, to a generously sympathetic comprehension of her exasperating symptoms, and to act with such fine consideration as to allay her emotional distress, without relinquishing your separateness of personality and proper independence of action. Whether because you are an essentially self-sufficing individual and can afford to be magnanimous in considering her needs, or whether you are only an aspirant to maturity of outlook and behavior, and therefore should practice magnanimity, as an exercise in growth—you have nothing to lose and much to gain in taking that chip off your shoulder you've been wearing at home, and trying, at all times, to be as considerate of your mother's feelings as you are of the feelings of other girls' mothers, when in their homes. M. H.

Be Colorful: Make Entrance Like Actress

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is supposed to be a bit of the actress in every woman, but very few women outside the theater are on to the trick of making an entrance. It is almost instinctive with the actress to make sure of creating a favorable first impression. Before she comes into a room filled with people, she pauses for an imperceptible second, takes a deep breath, tilts her head proudly, and glides in to three-four time.

The actress learns early in her career that the way she carrier herself can add or detract from her self-assigned role as a colorful personality. But unless you have had occasion properly to evaluate posture, you won't have any definite thoughts on the subject.

Ina Claire comes into a room with such an air of gaiety that she gives everyone else a lift. Miss Claire is one of the stage stars who have made it their business to learn to walk beautifully. Such perfect coordination is not easily acquired. But there are certain rules which make a tremendous difference in the impression you make.

Pull Yourself Together

It pays to take a second to pull yourself together before entering a room. Straighten yourself out and hold your head high. Never come in all slumped over with your eyes downcast. That makes you look timid—or as if you didn't hold a very high opinion of yourself.

When you are ready to sit down, walk over to a chair—take your time about it—and turn around casually, locate the seat of the chair with the back of one leg, other foot slightly advanced, and lower yourself easily.

The bit of the actress in you should keep you from ever sitting with knees apart, or with knees together and feet apart, or with your legs twined around the chair legs.

Get Up Gracefully

Keep your midsection stretched slim. Don't slump down into your girdle or you will not only look awkward, but heavier about the waistline.

When you are ready to get up and go, have one foot slightly forward, so the weight can be easily transferred to it for your first step. And in rising from a chair or sitting down, make your hip and thigh muscles do the work. Don't hoist yourself up with your arms.

Cardinal rules for appearing graceful and at ease depend on taking your time. Hurrying makes any woman look flustered and unsure of herself.

Keeping Fret Lines at Bay

Do you squint and scowl? Do your eyes feel tired and gritty? Exercise and massage may be what they need for sparkling "tone." Here is Ann Rutherford, showing you how to massage—but gently, gently!—the muscled area around the eyes. Other health-giving exercises for the orbs are outlined below, as well as suggestions for immaculately grooming those "windows of the soul."

Art Aids Nature in Beautifying Eyes

Bright Fall Colors Require Equally Bright Glance

By Carolyn Abbott.

WITH FASHION'S heavy accent on bright colors for late fall, eye makeup becomes a major consideration. Mahogany is up-to-date news in eye shadow and the last word on mascara is that two shades are better than one. For daytime try black on your lashes and brown on your brows, or the other way around.

Eye makeup is a delicate matter, but if you have the knack of doing things for yourself, time and care will see you through. The beauty mart is full of gadgets to help you—new little brushes, creams, correlated colors in eye-shadows and mascaras. You must experiment cautiously to achieve the expert's masterly touch.

You can make your eyelashes look longer and thicker than they really are by curling them. There's a sturdy lash curler with scissors-like handles that will do the trick for you. Use it consistently to train your lashes. If you apply a little cream or vaseline first, results are likely to be better and there's less danger of general breakage.

A Gadget for the Brows

Companion piece to the curler is a gadget for thinning out your brows and shaping them to suit the special contours of your face. With scissors-handled tweezers you can accomplish this process practically painlessly. A hot cloth applied before plucking lessens the ouch! Don't thin your brows into pin points or odd shapes. Natural looking brows not only are more flattering to the face but the latest style. Hollywood stars are the instigators of back-to-nature brows.

However, even well groomed brows and lashes artistically made up can't camouflage tired, dull looking eyes. Exercises and a good eye wash are the first lines of defense against strained, lusterless eyes. The first thing is to find a good eye wash and to use it faithfully morning and night. There are two excellent preparations. One is part of a well thought out eye kit, which comes in a neat little box for traveling. It holds a good eyebath, cream to rub under eyes and over eyelids, astringent with which to soak cotton pads for emergency first aid, and eyepacks that contain fragrant herbs and flower petals. The other competently contains a whole set of paper eye cups, eliminating glass washing—a dependable gadget to keep in your desk if you're a tired office worker.

Also, you can make your own eye bath with boiling water and boric acid. Any reliable druggist will tell you the proportions to use.

Exercises Help

Here are a few exercises that will relieve fatigue, strain and restore their natural brightness:

Bounce a ball and follow its rise and fall. Practice this at least five minutes and watch the sparkle come into your eyes.

Take a piece of white paper. Hold the head center front and follow the piece of white paper to the left and back again to the center. Do this slowly at least ten times. Repeat to the right.

With quick, light gentle movements, pinch the eyelids to stimulate circulation in that area.

Lie down and press the palm and heel of hand gently over the eyeball. The heat from the hand relaxes and rests the eyes.

In case you have the habit of frowning, prevent wrinkles by putting a cross of adhesive tape between the eyes—this pulls the skin and reminds you to keep the forehead smooth.

If you have squint wrinkles or crows feet massage gently under the eyes. Apply a rich eye cream to the area before massaging and leave a little of the cream on overnight.

Housing Plan Gives Comfort To Thousands

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Whatever happens abroad . . . whoever time proves right in the violent political disagreements at home . . . the world conflict now raging has already put an indelible stamp upon American life. And, so far, it's for better rather than for worse. For the monumental housing program now under way by the Government will assure better living for thousands of American families, come what may.

Thus far, more than 96,000 new homes are planned for, of which over 15,900 are already built. Those average around $3300 in cost and are planned scientifically to provide maximum comfort and convenience for this sum. They are assigned to defense workers according to the size of the family—the rent is 20 per cent of his income. If there are no children he'll have a one-bedroom house; if there are four children, he'll get a three-bedroom house.

Dining Rooms "Out"

Architecturally these houses conform to their locale . . . On the Atlantic Coast, the colonial type of house prevails; in the far West, the California ranchero style is highly practical and adaptable. The living rooms average in size 15 by 11 feet, the bedrooms 12 by 10, the kitchens 15 by 9½, the baths 5½ by 7. There is rarely a dining room. Closets for two are provided in each bedroom, with a guest closet, a linen closet and a utility storage space besides. Stove, refrigerator and heating unit are furnished, and some houses have linoleum in the kitchen and Venetian blinds at the windows. The walls are painted in carefully planned colors. Outside, the colors, trims, roofing and landscaping is done by experts, too.

Cost of Furnishing

The furnishing, though, is up to the families themselves. Some bring along some of their old stuff . . . but mostly these families are in the market for whole new repertoires of furnishings. They want bedroom sets of three to four pieces, living-room tables suitable for dining, a trim staunch sofa and easy chair ensemble, cupboard with efficient storage space that takes up little floor space, small radios, bunk beds for children, good bedding all around, versatile shelf arrangements.

It's Possible to Teach Yourself Piano Playing

STUCK in the same old rut, doing the same old things? Learn a new accomplishment, playing the piano! You'll find yourself making new friends, having new fun!

Teaching yourself is easy. You can start picking out a tune right away with a simple keyboard chart showing which note is for which key.

Simply place your chart behind your piano keyboard so that the paper keys fit behind the real keys. Then look at your sheet of music. Does it show an F sharp as in diagram? You'll find the same note on your chart and, directly below it, its pictured key—so quick as a wink you strike the correct real key below that.

Follow Chart

In the same way your chart pictures all the keys and notes most used in popular music.

At that rate you soon know quite a few simple tunes. Then with pointers on rhythm you go on to play real waltz, fox-trot and march music.

For popular sheet music there's another short cut. If the accompaniment's difficult, play the melody line with the right hand and, with the left, a few simple chords you can quickly learn from a table of chords.

Our 24-page instruction book, A SHORT CUT TO PIANO PLAYING, includes the table of chords and keyboard chart. Explains musical terms, time values. Has six favorite tunes for practice. Book is 8½ by 12 inches.

Send 15c in coins for our instruction book, A SHORT CUT TO PIANO PLAYING, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

Pointers Given On Shopping For Curtains

Because glass curtains have to take a great deal of wear and tear due to exposure to sun, wind and dirt, considerable care should be exercised in selecting them. The Cotton-Textile Institute has some pointers to give when shopping for cotton lace, net, marquisette or organdy curtains.

If the curtain has color in it, make sure it is colorfast so that it will withstand the sun's rays and frequent laundering.

Permanent finished marquisettes and organdies cut down work because they do not have to be starched each time.

Buy preshrunk material so that its shape will not change noticeably when laundered. Cloth woven with tightly twisted yarns will shrink less and give better service than fabric made from soft, loose yarns.

Because of the destructive action of the sun on the lower section of glass curtains, it is highly desirable to buy those that have equal-sized hems at top and bottom so they are reversible. This prolongs the life of the curtain considerably.

Better curtains have the selvages removed and are hemmed, which prevents uneven shrinking or stretching in laundering and makes the curtain hang better.

Health Experts Approve Trend To Twin Beds

America's preference for twin beds is becoming more pronounced each year, according to bedding authorities. Manufacturers report that one twin size bed is now sold to every four full sized beds. Two years ago the ratio was one to five, and ten years ago it was one to ten. Health experts approve this trend on the basis that solo sleepers rest more comfortably and get sounder slumber.

Home decorators, however, point out that the almost universal practice of placing twin beds side to side sometimes detracts from the appearance of the bedroom, especially those that are long and narrow. In these rooms, they say, it would be smarter to place the beds end-to-end or at right angles to each other.

The end-to-end method is most practical if the room has a long, unbroken wall. This will leave more space than if the beds projected out into the room. Placing the beds foot-to-foot, rather than head-to-head, is preferred. If the room is extra long, the beds may be separated by a table placed between the foot of each bed.

When the room is too small to take twin beds in the usual placement, they may be placed at right angles to each other, with a square table set in the corner formed by the two beds.

Chests Have More Room for Hope

Draftees doing their bit for Uncle Sam will be happy to learn that the girls they left behind can collect 20 times as much wedding finery in their cedar hope chests as grandma's chest was capable of holding when grandpa tromped off to do his bit.

While the streamlined dressing and sheer fabrics selected by modern girls are largely responsible for the greater amount of trousseau the average-sized hope chest will hold, cedar chest manufacturers have done their part by adding greatly to the serviceability of chests through modernization of designs and by inclusion of specialized compartments and trays.

Abbott and Costello Do It Again at RKO-Keith's

'Hold That Ghost,' Their Third Hit in Row, Craziest of the Lot and 'Sure-Fire Audience;' New March of Time Pillories Adolf Hitler

"HOLD THAT GHOST." Universal picturization of a story by Robert Lees and Fred Rinaldo, adapted to the screen by the authors and John Grant, starring Abbott and Costello, with Richard Carlson, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer, Evelyn Ankers, Marc Lawrence, Shemp Howard, Russell Hicks, William Davidson, the Andrews Sisters and Ted Lewis' Orchestra and entertainers. Directed by Arthur Lubin. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

ABBOTT AND COSTELLO are their own yardstick. The antic lunacies they bring to the screen cannot be judged by standards applicable to the insanities of any other team of comedians enlivening the cinema with the aberrations of the crazy house. By slightly modifying and considerably refining the hoariest of burlesque's slap-stickeries and the most palpable of ancient "gags," they have become, of a sudden, the one brace of low comics who infallibly can roll an audience up and down the aisles in convulsions of hysterical mirth. They prove it again in "Hold That Ghost," the new attraction at RKO-Keith's Theater.

"Hold That Ghost" is unadulterated hokum from start to finish, decorated at the beginning and end by Ted Lewis and His Orchestra, in a night club sequence or two, and by the Andrews Sisters in a couple of extraneous songs. There is nothing that might be termed a plot, but the chills-and-fever sequences that comprise the bulk of the narrative are strung together by a thin thread of continuity having to do with two innocent waiters and gas station attendants, who accidentally get on the trail of a vast amount of gangster plunder and eventually run it down and come up with their own hot spot.

The greater part of the action—and action is what it is—and the only part that really allows the stars to get into their surprisingly swift stride, occurs in an abandoned tavern that has lain idle since the old days of prohibition and the speakeasies. Add the mechanical gadgets, devised to disguise a gambling house and bar as a quiet roadside inn in the eyes of the law, to the secret panels, sliding doors, ambulant ghosts, strangling hands and mysterious murders customary in the usual mystery-thriller and you have the principal utensils with which the cast has to work. They work some of them overtime, but if community shrieking was what they were after, they got it at yesterday's second capacity performance.

No Time Out for Doldrums

Barring a creeping start that bejrays nothing of the hysteria that is to follow, "Hold That Ghost" gallops along like a cyclonic nightmare. This is to be blamed principally upon the infinite capacity for fear and fumbling manifested by the cherubic Lou Costello, who can get himself into more jams to the square minute than all the rest of the company put together—and they all do pretty well on their own accounts. Bud Abbott, as always, is the perfect "straight man" who often makes his partner seem a greater funster than he is. Adding most to the gooseflesh and high blood pressure are Joan Davis, Richard Carlson and Evelyn Ankers. Marc Lawrence, Russell Hicks and William Davidson are the big shots among the hoodlums, who set the whirligig in motion. The Andrews Sisters do their bit—with no further part in the proceedings—in "Sleepy Serenade" and "Aurora," this last being featured also by Ciro Rimac on another downtown stage this week. Ted Lewis still asks "Is everybody happy?", twirls his sloppy top hat and is cloudily shadowed by his Senegambian carbon copy. All very crasy but apparently precisely what the customers want.

You Can't Negotiate Peace With Hitler

The foremost screen auxiliary of the new Keith bill is "Peace—By Adolf Hitler," the latest release of the "March of Time." Aimed at the colossal perfidy of the greatest liar in history, this subject goes back before the days of Munich to trace again the cunning treachery of the master betrayer who has disrupted the world. It is familiar ground that is traversed, affording a magnificent occasion for boos, hisses and catcalls with an equal volume of cheers for our side. Walt Disney's "A Gentleman's Gentleman," with Pluto in the role of Mickey Mouse's bewildered butler, and the Pathe News are the additional complements of a feature that will run as long on Fifteenth Street as Keith's crowded booking-sheets will allow. It could do better than that, on the strength of yesterday's opening.

A Siren Snares Master Snerd

ELEANOR COUNTS AND EDGAR BERGEN flatter the bucolic Mr. Mortimer Snerd into intensified rivalry with that other old oaken buckaroo, Charlie McCarthy, on the set of "Look Who's Laughing," at RKO-Radio. Miss Counts, by the way, aspires to writing and directing and becoming a female Orson Welles, despite the fact that those who are expert in such things say she has the most beautiful ah, er, legs in Hollywood

Dietrich, Raft and Robinson Star in Earle's 'Manpower'

By Richard L. Coe

"MANPOWER." Warner Brothers' picturization of an original screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald, costarring Marlene Dietrich, Edward G. Robinson and George Raft, with Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Eve Arden, Barton MacLane, Ward Bond, Walter Catlett, Joyce Compton, Lucia Carroll, Egon Brecher, Cliff Clark, Joseph Crehan, Ben Welden, Barbara Pepper and Dorothy Appleby. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Gagged to the gills, with grade A cast, playing grade B script, "Manpower" arrived yesterday on the Earle screen. Marlene Dietrich and George Raft are allowed to hint of their ever-smoldering passions in this story of linemen and their dangerous pursuit, but so closely does each plot development follow the well-known specialties of its stars, "Manpower" is simply turgid, repetitious melodrama.

Father Time weighs heavily on this film, essentially a triangle story. With "comic relief" thrown in every whipstitch, the picture takes an hour and three-quarters to run, certainly 30 or 40 minutes too long. Consequently, while the comic sequences are on, one is lazily—and accurately—foretelling what's going to happen next to the vivid Dietrich and her friends, George Raft and Edward G. Robinson.

Certainly the background is fraught with more possibilities than many a more effective melodrama. The two men are trouble shooters for an electric power company, their duties doubled in danger when storm, sleet or wind threatens the power lines. Such a setting of a vengeful marvel which is taken so for granted in everyday life has a force that is only occasionally realized. Part of this lies in unnecessary attempts to explain the obvious to an audience. Says one lineman to another, perched atop a 50-foot pole in a driving storm: "This is high voltage. It will kill you." Another reason for the lack of suspensive flavor is the regular, almost measured, sequences revealing the linemen as grown-up kids, virile, simple and well-meaning, admirable, unexciting virtues.

Dietrich-Raft Effective Team

There's a definite surge of vitality when Miss Dietrich appears on the scene as an unreformed clip girl, just released from a year in jail. She's as alluringly barbaric as in her earliest films and even a session in her kitchen doesn't down her wicked charm. Her snatch of a song isn't anywhere near enough. Raft, too, keeps, as ever, his own bitter counsel and his scenes with Miss Dietrich have an excitement that is not always latent. These two are a potentially fascinating team.

Robinson, in the role of the man Miss Dietrich marries but does not love, has too stereotyped a role to behave in any outstanding fashion.

The part is surface stuff, about as lifelike as a Dali drawing. For gags, "Manpower" has a corps of Warner Brothers specialists. Alan Hale is a gruff oaf, whose practical jokes may set your memory muscles working for future use; Frank McHugh and Ward Bond are two of the more prominent linemen and Eve Arden is customarily amusing as a wise habituee of the smoke-filled night spot. You'll find Walter Catlett's hospital troubles amusing even though they are dragged in purely for gag values. Raoul Walsh's direction is probably far better than the Macaulay-Wald script.

That imperturbable juggler from Australia, amusing Stan Kavanaugh, headlines Harry Anger's stage revue, as pleasingly coordinated a variety bill as ever. Jo Lombardi leads his orchestra on the stage this week, furnishing proper rhythms for the bouncing Honey Family (which seems to have a new member), tapsters Lathrop and Lee and the Venezuelan scout-hiker, Julio Cesar Berrizbeitia, who's singing as simply Julio Cesar.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Lend-Lease Excludes the Films

Hollywood, Aug. 15 (INS).—Hollywood is really beginning to feel the speed of the defense program. The news leaked out today that Darryl Zanuck is postponing "Flight Surgeon" indefinitely, because it is impossible to "borrow" the necessary combat planes. The promised squadron of planes is now in active patrol service and Uncle Sam is making no promises about when they will be free for a movie, which is as it should be. But this left Jack Oakie high and dry without an assignment, so Darryl moved him into "Arise and Shine" with Linda Darnell.

NORMA SHEARER

"Arise and Shine" is the James Thurber opus originally titled "My Life and Hard Times" and concerns an aging football player and coach. Hard to imagine the effervescent Oakie as an aging anything, but there will be plenty of music and tunes furnished by Robbins and Rainger. It will be Mark Hellinger's first for Twentieth.

Saw lights in Norma Shearer's house when I dined with Virginia Zanuck, and inquiry brought forth word that Norma had returned from New York to talk over plans for "We Were Dancing." That's the Noel Coward skit from "Tonight at 8:30" that has been on the fire for a long time. It is now ready to start in two weeks with Melvyn Douglas in the top male role. Norma wanted Melvyn so much for this picture and I'm sure she must be glad. She brought home some stunning new clothes from the big town. Norma seems particularly happy these days. She had such fun in New York dancing with Ronald Balcom (Millicent Rogers' ex), seeing the shows and visiting friends on Long Island. Sylvia Fairbanks, who went to New York with her, remains in the East.

If Monte Woolley expected to step from his wheel chair on the movie set of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" right back onto the stage, he did not reckon with Jack Warner. No stage for Woolley until he has made at least one more pictur He has signed a contract for two, and Warners has been put to work to find a screen play for him. I heard an interesting comment on Bette Davis, who plays the Secretary's role in this icture. No one could understand why Bette did a retake on Tallulah Bankhead in "The Little Foxes." Someone who knows Bette well says she has a great ambition to go on the stage.

More Western Bandits Made Into Robin Hoods at the Met

"BAD MEN OF MISSOURI." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Robert E. Kent, adapted to the screen by Charles Grayson, featuring Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris and Arthur Kennedy, with Victor Jory, Alan Baxter, Walter Catlett, Howard da Silva, Faye Emerson, Russell Simpson, Virginia Brissac, Hugh Sothern, Dorothy Vaughan, Roscoe Ates and others. Directed by Ray Enright. At the Metropolitan.

Bandits must always wind up in prison, according to the wise edicts of the Hays office. No exceptions to this are the Younger Brothers in "Bad Men of Missouri." But they inhabit the most comfy calaboose you've ever seen, with Jane Wyman smiling at them and promising that all Missouri is going to see that they get pardons.

Like Jesse James, the Younger Brothers are celluloided into modern Robin Hoods. They rob banks and trains with the ease of daring young men on the flying trapeze, but their gains are all turned over to Missouri farmers for the purpose of paying tax warrants. This enables the Missouri agriculturists to keep their homes in the face of the machinations of jow-down Yankee carpetbaggers.

The Younger robberies are great fun, except for the final debacle, when they're perforated extensively but not fatally by a sheriff and his posse. There's the time when they run a herd of cattle through a main street and clear it of the law's astounded minions. When collecting from train passengers, they meet old comrades of the War Between the States, genially return their wallets. And you'll love their first robbery, a strictly unintentional affair, when they try to rescue Walter Catlett from an overturned stage coach and he forces his money bag upon them.

Trilogy of Genial Youths

Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris and Arthur Kennedy made the Younger boys a rather appealing bunch of young buckos. None of them does a great deal of acting, but Dennis is handsome, Wayne looks fine on horseback and Arthur conveys the impression of a frustrated sensitiveness, especially in his love affair with Jane Wyman.

"Bad Men of Missouri" conveys the impression of having been done with almost as much speed as a Younger bank robbery, and perhaps with many a side glance at the script of "Jesse James." There's naturally much of the motivation of the James story, with land-grabbers seizing the Younger farm and the father of the boys shot down in the melee. But the shadings are laid on more thickly, comedy is largely missing, except for the efforts of Walter Catlett. Perhaps it's the difference between black-and-white and Technicolor. But, at that, the picture is good box-office, drew a big and apparently highly pleased audience at its Metropolitan opening yesterday.

Clowning and music figure richly in a big cluster of shorts. Andy Clyde has an extra-dizzy comedy, "Building a Ghost House." The current cartoon, "We the Animals, Speak," is mostly about Kansas City Kitty and her adventures with a dastardly gang of rats. There's also a "Vaudeville Album" of acts in the manner of grandpappy's day. The newsreel shows that annual delight, the Wildwood baby parade; fancy log-rolling, a 2-year-old swimming queen and the candidates for the title of (Oh, my goodness!) the 1941 "Sweater Queen."

HEDDA HOPPER

Old-Timers Get 'Stop' and 'Go'

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 15. With picture production at its peak, old-timers are getting their best breaks in years. In my rounds of the sound stages, I'm constantly running into old friends of the silent era, like Aileen Pringle, Annn Q. Nilsson, Monte Blue, Jack Mulhall and many others. I ran into Aileen on "They Died With Their Boots On" set and she said, "You know, Hedda, it's a funny thing, but many of us have been kept off the screen because we were so widely known. Producers claimed old-timers in small parts slowed down the picture because the audience, recognizing them, say, 'Oh, there's so-and-so! Remember her?'—meanwhile forgetting about the picture."

FRED MacMURRAY

Well, all I've got to say is that if these veterans can stop a story, they certainly ought to be able to make one go. And I'm predicting, with the breaks they're getting now, we're going to see some stars reborn.

Jinx Falkenberg, who's been doing summer stock at Dennis, Mass., has been signed to a long-term contract. Won't tell who gave her one wonderful aquamarine ring set with rubies and diamonds, with matching clip.

Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Regis Toomey and Alexis Smith all flew down to San Diego for the opening of "Dive Bomber."

Playing in two pictures and making wardrobe tests for the third, Ann Sheridan is busier than the proverbial paperhanger. When she steps from "King's Row" to "The Man Who Came to Dinner," as often happens in a single day, she has to have her hair-do changed to fit styles 40 years apart.

Marian Marsh and Jack LaRue were in the midst of a tender scene in "Gentleman From Dixie" when Marian glanced heavenward and let out a yell you could hear in Pomona. A huge spider was spinning out .s web from the mike and just about to land on Marian's head.

Well, well, the pinch is on in Hollywood. Now that the Government's taken all of the balsa wood for life preservers and the "breakaway" props on the sets have to be made of papier mache, they're a bit nervous over the outcome on "The Corsican Brothers" set. They have a terrific knock-down-and-drag-out fight in one scene, and they're afraid it'll end up looking like a paper chase!

Ralph Byrd, Korda's new find for "Jungle Book," whom he recruited from the "Dick Tracy" serial, is setting up the drinks on location. Byrd, who's one of the best riders in the industry, had to do a scene bareback and sidesaddle, and bit the dust three distinct times before he got the hang of it.

It certainly must be love. Carlton Alsop, Martha Scott's husband, gets up at 5 o'clock every morning, prepares her breakfast, and then drives her to the studio for "One Foot in Heaven" . . . Ben Blue, who reopens at Slapsie Maxie's this month, is inaugurating a "Rat Night" when all of the widely-known screen heavies are invited to step up and tell just how tough they really are. Wonder if they'll bring their wives along!

Richard Greene will make a picture in London called "Story Unpublished," with Valerie Hobson, the "Night Train" girl.

Wind Does Tricks with Hat

The wind played tricks with a woman's broad-brimmer straw hat at Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest, much to the amusement of bystanders. Lifted from a shopper's head, the chapeau sailed six stories high, floated to and fro for some minutes, then finally came to rest on a second floor ledge of a building, where it was rescued.

Downright Considerate

Fort Story, Va., Aug. 15.—Private Blair, of the 71st Coast Artillery, showed up to collect his pay long after the rest of Battery G had collected. The captain asked the private whether he needed the money immediately, since he had locked up the uncalled for envelopes.

"No, sir, I don't need it right now," Blair replied, "but a lot of other fellows do."

Kelly, New Police Chief, Vows Action

Fifth Inspectorship May Be Restored; Detective Chief Post a Toss-up

Edward J. Kelly, 59-year-old veteran of 35 year's police service, became major and superintendent of Metropolitan police yesterday, promising "to do all in my power to bring the department up to a high standard of efficiency."

One of his first efforts, he said last night, would be to bring about restoration of a fifth inspectorship, a position left vacant after the retirement last spring of Inspector William E. Holmes.

"There will be other appointments in the near future," Kelly asserted. "I'm not going to discuss them now, but I intend to recommend to the Commissioners only those men I feel are best suited for the jobs."

Kelly was speaking of four inspectorships which are now vacant. The positions include two assistant superintendents—one in charge of personnel and the other chief of detectives—and two district supervisor posts.

If Kelly is successful in his attempt to restore Holmes' job, a fifth inspectorship will have to be filled.

Refuses to Indicate Choice

He refused to indicate his choices for the jobs, saying only that the announcement would be made by the Commissioners.

As predicted by The Post three weeks ago, Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Precinct, is scheduled to be named chief of personnel.

It seemed still to be a tossup last night regarding the chief of detectives post. Capt. Ira E. Keck, present acting chief of detectives, was approved for the job by Melvin C. Hazen, former chairman of the Board of Commissioners, more than a month ago.

His appointment, however, was held up pending the outcome of a Congressional investigation of police.

Promotions Held Up

Promotion of Callahan and Capt. Richard E. Mansfield, slated for an inspectorships, were held up at the same time.

Though Callahan seemed certain of the post of assistant superintendent in charge of personnel, speculation was high last night over whether Mansfield or Keck would be chief of detectives.

The other inspectors will be chosen from the following: Capts. Clarence Talley, Seventh Precinct; Milton D. Smith, Traffic Division; John H. Fowler, Thirteenth Precinct, and Clement B. Cox, Eighth Precinct.

Regardless of who is named chief of detectives, Lieut. Robert J. Barrett, Third Precinct, is thought to be in line for assistant chief. Barrett is one of the ace detectives who transferred from the detective bureau because of "unbearable" working conditions, according to testimony before the House Investigation Committee.

Retirements Likely

Other changes likely to take place before the end of the year are the retirements of at least five precinct commanders. Among these are Sidney Marks, Hugh Groves, Joseph Pierson, Joseph Morgan, Jeremiah Sullivan and Lieut. H. H. Carlin, harbor master.

Maj. Kelly took over his new duties yesterday morning. His office was packed with flowers and hardly a minute of the day elapsed that some prominent citizen or high Government official was not offering congratulations to the new chief. Among the callers late yesterday was Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who was chairman of the Congressional committee.

A native Washingtonian, Kelly was appointed to the force in 1906 as a foot patrolman. He spent a few years as a bicycle patrolman before becoming a detective sergeant in 1915.

Nicknamed 'Gray Eagle'

For 18 years Kelly remained in the Detective Bureau, gaining a Nation-wide reputation and the nickname "gray eagle." He was regarded as one of the best pickpocket sleuths in the country. He was chief of the homicide squad.

Made a lieutenant in 1929, he remained in the detective office for two years until he was promoted to captain. He was placed in charge of the Third Precinct at that time.

He was appointed inspector in 1935.

"I realize there has been much criticism about inefficiency and laxity in the Police Department," Kelly declared yesterday. "I propose to do all in my power to bring the department up to a high standard of efficiency.

"I deeply appreciate the help and cooperation I have received in the past and will receive from the citizens of Washington, the press and the radio.

"I ask hearty cooperation from all policemen in the department that we may render proper performance of police service to all residents of Washington, visitors and those persons who come here daily to their employment."

Dr. Leiby Quits Health Bureau

The Commissioners yesterday accepted the resignation of Dr. George M. Leiby, for more than a year director of the Health Department's Bureau of Venereal Disease.

Dr. Leiby, who came here from North Carolina at the request of Health Officer George C. Ruhland to take over the clinic, will return to his home State, where he has been offered a public health position.

The Commissioners have announced no successor. Dr. Leiby leaves August 31. The job pays $5600 a year.

D. C. Projects For Defense Aid Discussed

Washington is urgently in need of funds to expand and improve municipal facilities now taxed to capacity by the influx of new residents and spreading defense activities, it was revealed yesterday at the District Building.

The Commissioners and department heads met for the first time with Federal authorities to discuss the city's proposed six million dollar PWA defense construction program. The money is sought under the Lanham Act providing 150 million dollars for added facilities in sorely pressed communities throughout the country.

The Budget Bureau now has under consideration an application from the Commissioners for permission to obtain loans and grants under the legislation.

School Item Largest

The biggest single item sought here is nearly two million dollars for three new schools and additions to three others.

The program also calls for increased fire protection facilities, public health improvements, highway projects, water main and sewer extensions.

Meeting with the Defense Public Works Review Committee—a four-man board designated to make recommendations to the Federal Works Administration which is distributing the Lanham Act funds—the city heads pictured an acute problem.

They reported that facilities designed to cope with a normal population growth over the next ten years already are over-burdened. New problems of water supply, sewage disposal and highway control have arisen because of the city's close proximity to Army training camps, the committee was told.

Projects Listed

Among more important and urgently needed projects listed by the Commissioners and their department chiefs were:

A new fire enginehouse in the vicinity of Fort Totten Park and extension of the fire alarm system into rapidly growing sections of Southeast. Estimated cost: $600,000.

A new maternal and child welfare ward at Gallinger Hospital. Estimated cost: $600,000.

Improvements and extensions to four streets leading to Federal agencies and Army posts. Estimated cost: $430,000.

New water filters and mains at the Delcarlia Reservoir and at Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station. Estimated cost, $965,000.

A new storm sewer at the foot of South Capitol Street, a new city refuse garage and three public convenience stations. Estimated cost, $1,091,000.

A new sewage treatment plant at the District Training School, Laural, Md. Estimated cost, $75,000.

Additional $741,150

An additional $741,150, it was explained, is needed for engineering, architectural and administrative work on the proposed objects.

The new schools would be located at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Streets Southeast; Forty-ninth and Washington Place Northeast and Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast.

The review committee includes Carroll Beale, assistant regional director, Public Works Administration; Morton Wallerstein, chief of region 2, National Resources Planning Board; Graham Martin, assistant regional coordinator, FSA, and John Nolen, jr., chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

D. C. Man Seized In Numbers Case

Louis H. Walters, 32, of 706 Eleventh Street Southeast, a crane operator at the Naval Medical Center construction job on Rockville Pike near Bethesda, Md., was arrested yesterday on charges of accepting numbers bets from Montgomery County police.

According to county police, Walters is alleged to have accepted several bets from Detective Lieut. Theodore Vollten at the medical center. Walters was arrested by Lieut. Vollten, head of the county detective bureau, and Detective Sergt. James S. McAuliffe. He was released on bond of $1000 for a later hearing.

Police Charged With Brutality By D. C. Man

Police officials last night had under consideration an affidavit charging police brutality from Homer T. Long, 37, of 1205 Thirty-fourth Street Northwest.

Long, foreman of the Dupont Iron Works, said in his formal complaint that his left wrist was broken and that he was clubbed over the head by a plainsclothes policeman, August 4, at Potomac Avenue and M Street Northwest.

He was accosted by the policeman, Long said, while in an alley about 150 feet from M Street. The officer said he was going to arrest him, but did not identify himself nor show a badge, the complainant stated.

Refusing to go with the policeman because "I thought it was a shakedown," Long said he was struck several times in the face and over the head before being taken to the Seventh Precinct station and charged with drunk, disorderly and with assault.

Long said he was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where eight stitches were taken in his scalp and that he was transferred to Gallinger Hospital. Three other stitches were put in his head and his arm was put in a splint, Long said.

He remained in the hospital for five days before being released and arraigned in Police Court on the charges.

Judge John P. McMahon dismissed the charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct without hearing a word of defense testimony. The assault case is pending jury trial assignment.

Long's complaint was referred to Maj. Edward J. Kelly for review and will be turned over to an inspector for investigation.

Negro Drowns In Tidal Basin

Anderson S. Jackson, Negro, 25, of 1515 B Street Southeast, was drowned about 1:30 a. m. yesterday when he fell into the Tidal Basin near the floodgate at the foot of Fourteenth Street Southwest. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

Police said that Jackson was fishing, when he apparently slipped and fell in. A Quantico Marine, Private William C. Wood, who heard Anderson crying for help, stripped off his uniform and dove in to find him. He reported he was unable to locate Anderson. Harbor Police recovered the body about two hours later.

Deserter Held In Robbery After Chase

Ten-Block Flight In Commandeered Auto Follows Liquor Shop Holdup

A spectacular ten-block chase through downtown traffic by two automobiles and a taxi resulted in the capture last night of a 21-year-old fugitive who was alleged to have robbed a liquor store of some $500 a few minutes earlier.

The bandit commandeered a passing automobile and fled after staging a holdup, apparently without a weapon, at a liquor store at 803 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Happy Landis, 34, manager, turned over the cash when the robber held his hand beneath his sports jacket as if fingering a pistol. A customer stood by with his hands in the air.

Another customer, George Thomas, of 419 W Street Northeast, who entered the store as the bandit was leaving, chased him to Tenth and E Streets Northwest and into a taxicab operated by Anthony Pegrello, of 228 Third Street Northwest.

Driver Refuses to Budge

When Pegrello refused to obey his command to speed away, the fugitive jumped out of one door as Thomas and another bystander, who had joined the chase, pulled open the other.

He then caught the door handle of a passing automobile driven by Charles Wallack, about 20, of 3933 Military Road Northwest, and, after being dragged some feet, managed to get into the front seat with Wallack and his sister, Helen, 22.

Again thrusting his hand into his coat as if to grasp a pistol, he ordered Wallack to drive on, full speed.

Pegrelle gave chase in his taxi, as did Thomas in one automobile and three men in another, Donald Jones, A. R. Morford and George M. Coleman.

Looking for a policeman all the time, Wallack sped the fugitive down E Street to Pennsylvania Avenue and around the Ellipse to Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue.

Sees Policeman, Stops

There he sighted Park Policeman J. A. Henricksen and, yelling for aid, stopped the car. Miss Wallack, also yelling, tried to open the door and push the bandit to the street.

Henricksen dashed up and apprehended the fugitive. Cab Driver Pegrello pulled up with Traffic Policeman Odes White, whom he had picked up at Thirteenth and E Streets, and White aided Henricksen. The two other automobiles of pursuers drove up about the same time.

No gun and only $175 was found on the prisoner, described by police as a deserter from Fort Riley, Kans. The store's proprietor said the bandit definitely took between $500 and $600.

The prisoner was held at Third Precinct Police Station pending a lineup scheduled for tonight, when victim and witnesses will attempt to identify him. Police said he had been A. W. O. L. from Fort Riley for six days and had come to Washington to visit friends at Fort Myer, where he formerly was stationed.

2 Distant Temblors Recorded in U. S.

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Aug. 15.—Two earthquake shocks were recorded today on instruments at Fordham University by the Rev. Joseph Lynch, Seismologist, who said the tremors probably occurred about 3,080 miles from New York. Father Lynch reported that the disturbances might possibly have occurred underseas, perhaps off a Mexican coast. The first shock was recorded at 2:17:50 a. m. and the second at 2:24:32 a. m.

[Seismologists at Weston College (Weston, Mass.) reported that a strong earthquake occurred at 1:09:09 a. m. yesterday approximately 3,000 miles east or west from Weston. The shock lasted for two hours.]

Senator Asks Virginia Cede Land to D. C.

McCarran Predicts Bill for Return Of Arlington County, Part of Alexandria

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, last night announced that legislation will be drafted calling upon Virginia to cede back to the District territory Congress gave back to Virginia in 1846.

The land the chairman of the Senate District Committee would repossess for the Nation's Capital is that portion of the original 10-mile square contributed by Virginia in 1789 to provide the infant United States with a seat of Government.

It embraces a large part of the City of Alexandria and all of Arlington County — approximately 30 square miles in all.

The present area of the District, approximately 70 square miles, was contributed by Maryland in 1788.

The Nevadan who fought to the last against location of the 35 million dollar War Department building in Arlington County on the ground that Congress stood to lose some of its control over the Army, announced he has directed his assistant, R. F. Camalier, to draft the necessary bill.

"It will be an act of Congress declaring null and void the 1846 Act of Recession, which Congress had no business enacting in the first place," McCarran said.

"It may take the Army and Navy to get that territory back, but we are going to get it.

"Then they will have plenty of room to build all of the buildings they want to build."

Repeatedly, McCarran, in the fight over the building site, has called the attention of Congress to the fact that the District was set aside to give effect to the eighth section of the First Article of the Constitution giving Congress the right to exercise "exclusive" authority at the seat of Government.

With the War Department in Virginia, he has contended, it may be possible the activities of the agency or Congressional control over it may be interfered with by State law or local ordnances.

To bolster his contention, he cited the Virginia-District fight for control of the new National Airport at Gravelly Point, where the boundary is in dispute, but where the line of demarcation appears to put the airport terminal in Virginia.

In the Senate, McCarran may have at least one supporter. Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, has declared he is convinced Congress had no right to cede back the Virginia portion of the District. Because of this conviction, he stated, he feels no alarm about the prospect of State interference with the Army.

Members of several Catholic University religious orders and representatives of the Polish Embassy yesterday attended mass for the repose of the soul of Ignace Jan Paderewski, Polish pianist, composer and statesman. He died June 30.

The mass was said at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception by the Rev. Joseph Sielski, M. I. C., representing the Rev. Canon Casimer Ignace Gronkowski, pastor of St. Adalbert's Church in Chicago, Ill.

The 200 participants in the private service afterward made a pilgrimage to Arlington Cemetery to place a wreath at Paderewski's grave in commemoration of the twenty-first anniversary of the Battle of Vistula, when the Poles turned back the Russian forces. The event is often called the "Miracle of Vistula."

Parole Favored For D. C. Man in Maryland Prison

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—One convict was recommended for parole and another for commutation of sentence today by Parole Director Herman M. Moser.

Parole was advocated for Edward S. Jackson, of Washington, sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary on a charge of assault with intent to rob a young woman motorist in Montgomery County in 1938.

Parole officers said Jackson's car collided with the young woman's and that later the woman's compact and $9, which had been in her potckетbook, were found in Jackson's possession.

William J. Washington, serving nine months on a charge of larceny of a wrist watch in Baltimore in 1938, was recommended for commutation of sentence.

5 Are Hurt In D.C. Traffic During Rain

Four in One Car Injured as It Skids And Overturns in 1-Inch Downpour

A hard, driving rain last night brought injuries to five on District highways, and forced postponement of the Watergate opera and Meridian Hill Park starlight concert.

On the credit side, the downpour brought temporary relief to the drought-stricken farms of northwestern Maryland, and tidings of mild, cool weather for the Washington area over the weekend.

Four persons were hurt, two seriously, when the auto in which they were riding skidded and overturned on Naylor Road Southeast at the District line. The injured were treated at the scene by Dr. Joseph Perlson, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who was driving by, and taken to Casualty Hospital.

Janey Conway, 42, of 829 D Street Southeast, suffering from injuries of the face, skull, and pelvis, and Edward Crosthwaite, 50, of 1445 East Capitol Street, with head, chest, and rib injuries, were said to be in serious condition. Also hurt were Helen McSweeney, 41, of 206 Ninth Street Southeast, and William McSweeney, 57, same address.

The driver of the auto was listed by police as Thomas J. Cannon, 39, of 507 Seward Square Southeast. He escaped unhurt, and was charged with reckless driving.

Another traffic casualty during the rain was Arthur Carey, 14, Negro, of 1212 Potomac Street Northwest, who suffered injuries to the face and skull when struck by an auto in 3200 block M Street Northwest. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital. The driver, police said, was Harry L. Hippler, 25, of Arlington, Va.

More Than Inch Falls

A comparatively slight shower during the late afternoon halted the Nats-Red Sox baseball game at the end of the seventh inning. After a slight letup, drenching rain started at 7:30 p. m., so that more than an inch had fallen by 10:30, when it stopped again.

The San Carlo performance of "Aida" at the Watergate was postponed until next Wednesday night. Tonight the company will present Bizet's "Carmen," with Coe Glade in the title role.

Also washed out last night, the Starlight chamber music concert featuring the Kolisch Quartet and four National Symphony players, will be held tonight at 8:15 in Meridian Hill Park.

Hardest hit by last night's rain were Washington's outlying area in Maryland, where the wind whipped up a storm. Many cellars were flooded in Bethesda. At the Silver Spring railroad viaduct Georgia Avenue became impassable and traffic had to be detoured.

After rising to a high of 80 today, the mercury will drop tonight with cooler weather scheduled also for tomorrow. The five-day forecast predicted "below normal" temperatures through Monday, with rising temperatures and rain Tuesday or Wednesday.

The scholarship was presented to Miss Kiser, who lives at 1832 Biltmore Street Northwest, by Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, national scholarship chairman. It is given annually to a son or daughter of a veteran who is outstanding in scholastic ranking.

New officers of the legion auxiliary honorary society, elected at the Thursday convention session and installed last night include: Mrs. Virginia C. McCarthy, chapeau departmental; Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, senior demi chapeau; Mrs. Helen K. Ware, l'aumonier; Mrs. Rae Zoantz, l'archiviste; Mrs. Lester Rodruck, la Surintendente, and Mrs. Helen Hetzer, la concierge.

The meeting was entertained by the American Legion Columbia Post, No. 34, juvenile entertainers in a group of singing, dancing and specialty numbers. A reception on the Hotel Washington roof closed the convention.

3 Sufferers Face Trial in Breach Of Disease Law

Two men and a woman will appear in Police Court today where prosecutors will press charges they are tuberculosis sufferers and have violated the law dealing with communicable diseases.

The trio are Thompson Mack, 32, of the 800 block of N Street Northwest; John Dean, 28, 400 block of C Street Northwest, and Mrs. Mae L. Webb, 47, 300 block of Eighth Street Northeast.

They were arraigned in Police Court yesterday, each of the men charged with failing to have a room exclusively for his own use as required by law, while Mrs. Webb is alleged to have left a hospital before being discharged. They were arrested on warrants sworn out by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the District Health Department.

The case was continued until today because of the necessity of identifying as their X-ray pictures showing they suffer from tuberculosis.

Bond-Selling Job Well Done, Treasury House Moves On to N.Y

Washington's "defense midway," scene of patriotic fanfare and martial display for the last 46 days and nights, became just plain Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest again last night amid a driving rain.

The final nightly program, which included a "songfest," rang the curtain down on a show that bid fair to beat all attendance records for entertainments in the Nation's Capital.

Every night since it opened, hundreds had jammed the "midway" nightly to hear band concerts, witness patriotic entertainments and look at the imposing display of war implements beneath the bright lights on the grassy rectangle. And thousands of soldiers and girls had jammed adjacent E Street for Saturday night "block dances."

Few programs were interrupted by rain, and even the last stand of last night was completed before the downpour came.

While Treasury officials who sponsored it to spur the sale of defense saving bonds and stamps were unable to estimate the number of persons who visited the exhibition, they said the number of stamps sold was twice as large as they had anticipated.

"The people of Washington have come through," they said.

Virtually all of the military and naval equipment had been removed by midnight, and the glass house with red, white and blue trim made ready for a trip to New York and a continued career as headquarters for sale of defense savings stamps in that city.

Carrasquel Stops Red Sox, 6 to 3, for Nats

Game Halted In 8th Inning By Downpour

Manager Joe Cronin To Protest Calling Of Play; Red Sox Limited to 8 Hits

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

That three-game losing streak of the Nats got the Carrasquel treatment yesterday and was very abruptly checked. Big Alex, the good neighbor from Venezuela, delivered a 6-3 victory over the Red Sox and extended his own private winning streak to six straight.

But the Red Sox hope it is only a tentative sort of victory. They filed formal protest after the game, which was called on account of rain and wet grounds with Boston at bat in the eighth. Manager Joe Cronin protested on the grounds that "the Washington Club was negligent in failing to order the field covered when the game was halted in the eighth."

Umpire-in-Chief George Pipgras, after a half-hour wait, stuck a timid toe into the wet baselines, noted that the rain was still falling, and called it off officially. At the time the Red Sox had one man on base and none out.

Manager Bucky Harris poohpoohed the Boston protest. He pointed out that if the tarpaulin was not ordered on the field, it was no fault of the Washington club in as much as the umpires are in complete authority after the game starts. It is the umpire in chief's province to order the canvas on the field, Harris declared.

Red Sox Take Lead

As for the game, it wasn't one of Carrasquel's better pitching jobs and the 7500 Ladies' Day guests and customers were not at all positive that Carrasquel would come up with his sixth straight pitching triumph when the Red Sox cuffed him around in the first three innings to take a 3-0 lead, but the Nats went to bat for him nicely.

One of the virtues of the Nats yesterday was their patience. They waited until young Earl Johnson filled the bases with three straight walks and then slugged him for three big runs. Johnson, a young southpaw late of the Piedmont League, lost his head on the plate and his 3-1 lead when Mickey Vernon singled to center with the bases full.

The Nats banged Johnson and his successor, venerable Mike Ryba, for ten hits in the seven innings, while Carrasquel was giving up only eight. Buddy Lewis and Al Evans each made a pair of the Washington hits but the prize offering was Vernon's run-laden single in the fifth.

Joe Cronin drew a walk to start the eighth for Boston, and then the rain, which had been only a mere drizzle for three innings, really came. After a half hour's wait, during which the tarpaulin was not spread on the field, Umpire in Chief George Pipgras gingerly poked his toe into the baselines and said it was too muddy to continue. The Red Sox didn't like it.

Williams Pops Out

The Red Sox won the first three innings decisively when they handed Johnson his 3-0 lead, but Carrasquel kept the Nats in the ball game thereafter. The dark-visaged righthander who had beaten the Sox very convincingly in Boston last weekend, didn't give up a run after the third, and, in fact, only two hits.

He was in trouble in the first inning when Foxx singled and Cronin walked with one out, but he got over the hump by forcing Ted Williams to pop up. He didn't have such success in the second, however.

A walk to Jimmy Foxx had Carrasquel in trouble at the start of the second and the Sox piled three hits into the inning. Doerr singled to left, and Case made a superlative throw to get Foxx at third, but Doerr dashed to second on the play

Only Three To Face Wire In Rich Race

Fairymant, Lord Kitchener Other Horses in $20,000 Saratoga Classic

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Whirlaway and a mud-making rain threw a panic into the available 3-year-olds today, and only two were willing to take a chance against the champ in tomorrow's seventy-second running of the historic Travers Stakes.

Attention, the only colt to beat Whirly since he began his charge through the 3-year-olds in the Kentucky Derby, couldn't make it because of an ailing leg. So, of those on hand, Sam Riddle's Lord Kitchener and William Dupont's Fairymant were the only entries besides that of the Kentucky cannonball named for the $20,000 renewal of the Nation's oldest horse race.

Spinaway Draws Filed of Ten

However, neither the rain nor a racing "hep" bothered the entries for the Spinaway Stakes for 2-year-old fillies. Even though Alf Vanderbilt's Petrify, unbeaten in all four of her starts this year, was one of the early entries, nine others dared to take a crack at the $10,000 jackpot. Heading these hopeful young ladies were Whirly's stablemate, Mar-Kell, daughter of the same sire (Blenheim II) and William Ziegler, jr.'s Romping Home, winner of the Schuylerville Stakes here less than a week ago.

As if Whirly's mighty reputation wasn't enough, when the dreary downpour started this afternoon, threatening mud for tomorrow, it began to look like even the two willing to take a chance might just as well stay home. Warren Wright's Whizz-bang figured to go to the post at odds of about 1 to 8 and probably will have just that easy a time of it.

Whirly's Jockey Unknown

Trainer Ben Jones hadn't made up his mind tonight as to the jockey he'd name to steer Whirlaway straight in the mile-and-a-quarter gallop. Eddie Arcaro, the winning Derby-Preakness-Belmont pilot, is grounded under suspension, and the Wright contract jockey, Wendell Eads, isn't rated strong enough to keep the chestnut flier going in a straight line. It appeared, therefore, that Trainer Ben probably would put the finger on Alf Robertson, who was aboard Whirlaway when he barely nipped War Relic in the Saranac last week.

Reds Defeat Cubs, 3-1; Tie For Third Spot

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Johnny Vander Meer's twelfth victory of the year and his fourth in succession sent Cincinnati into a third-place tie with the idle Pittsburgh Pirates today as the Reds, held to five hits, defeated Chicago, 3 to 1.

The Cubs' lone run came on the second ball pitched to Lou Stringer, first man at the plate, a home run that cleared the left field fence with plenty to spare. Although singles by Stan Hack and Hank Leiber followed, the double no-hit kid of 1938 got two men on strikeouts, and Babe Dahlgren flied to end the threat.

Thereafter, the Jersey southpaw parceled out only three singles and walked as many. His strikeouts totaled eight.

Until the fourth it appeared as if Eaves might emerge winner. Frank McCormick blasted his tenth homer of the year, however, to tie the score, and in the fifth Jim Gleeson followed with his season's third roundtripper to give 1940's world champs the edge.

The Reds added another in the seventh on Bill Werber's double and Ernie Lombardi's single, with another single by Eddie Joost going to waste.

Aide to Howard Jones For Past 12 Years Gets 1-Year Contract

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 15.—Sam Barry will carry on where the late Howard Jones left off as headman of the University of Southern California football regime.

The likable Sam, christened Justin McCarthy Barry 48 years ago in Aberdeen, S. Dak., was named head football coach of the mighty Trojans today. President Rufus V. Von Kleinsmid of the university announced the appointment.

A youngish-looking veteran of a quarter century in major college athletics—the last 12 years as chief assistant to Jones and head coach of basketball and baseball—Barry stepped into his old master's shoes with the same length contract Jones worked under — a year-to-year agreement.

$7000 Or More

The salary was not disclosed, but best guesses placed the figure at between $7000 and $10,000. Jones was believed to have received between $12,000 and $15,000 a year during his long tenure at U. S. C.

"I consider it a great honor to be selected for the job," Barry said. "I'll certainly do my best and try not to let down those who have

Pauline Betz Bows in Upset In Semifinals

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 15.—Cool and unerring Helen Bernard, of New York City, knocked top-seeded Pauline Betz, Rollins College coed, out of the seventeenth annual Essex Country Club Invitation Tennis Tournament today in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3.

The blond Cornell junior, seeded fourth, gained the tournament finals along with unseeded Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, who was forced to three sets by first-seeded Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, in winning, 8—10, 6—3, 6—3.

Miss Bernard won from the baseline in her semifinal match with the favored Miss Betz, who was beaten by Alice Marble in last year's finals. The 20-year-old New York City girl calmly played back and permitted Miss Betz to commit errors that contributed to her defeat.

After dropping the long first set, Miss Osborne powdered the ball past Miss Arnold to win the next sets easily.

She also teamed with Patricia Canning, of Hidden Valley, Calif., for a strenuous semifinal doubles victory over Miss Bernard and Louise Brough, of Beverly Hills, Calif., 6—4, 3—7, 6—4.

Miss Betz and Miss Bundy, topseeded, came through in the other doubles bracket with a straight-set triumph over Miss Arnold and Hope Knowles, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., 6—2, 6—2.

Washington has not lost a tournament game, but Gastonia has lost one in the double elimination series.

8 Years a Cripple, Portland Girl Shatters Swimming Record

By the Associated Press

High Point, N. C., Aug. 15.—Fourteen-year-old Nancy Merki, who was a cripple the first eight years of her life, set a new American record for the 1,500 meters today as she sent her Portland, Oreg., team booming into the lead on the first of the A. A. U.'s national women's swimming championships.

Slender little Nancy, a junior at Grant High, Portland, trimmed an amazing 17 seconds off the five-year-old mark of Lenore Kight Wingard.

She swam the approximate mile over City Lake's 50-meter course in 22:12.2 and she needed every second of it, for 17-year-old Ann Hardin, of Indianapolis, matched her, stroke for stroke, over the full distance and also shattered the old record by a wide margin. Her time was 22:12.3.

Miss Merki's performance was still shy of the world record of 21:45.7, held by Denmark's Hveger.

She nosed out Marylin Sahner, of the New York Women's Swimming

Leonard to Seek 8th in Row Today; Will Face Grove

Dutch Leonard, owner of a seven-game winning streak, takes it to the mound against the Boston Red Sox today. He'll be trying to annex his fourteenth victory of the season.

It will be Leonard vs. Lefty Grove, the only 300-game winner now pitching in the majors. Grove has been balked twice in his last two starts. He was knocked from the box by the Nats last weekend in Boston.

Leonard, if he scores an eighth straight triumph today, will tie Bob Feller's record winning streak of the year in the American League.

POVICH

For the high crime of finishing in the second division with a second-division ball club, Del Baker will probably be fired as manager of the Detroit Tigers. Owner Walter O. Briggs has been intimating very strongly, at least, that Baker won't be rehired. What a whale of a difference ten months can make.

Last October, Baker was gubernatorial timber in Michigan. He had just steered the Tigers into the 1940 pennant in a dramatic late-season rush. Under Baker, the Tigers outgamed the Cleveland Indians to win the pennant. Nobody credited them with being a great ball team, but Baker apparently had done a job on them. He was generally regarded as a very smart manager.

The Tigers, in fact, were held in such low esteem even after winning the pennant, that one wag suggested a new World Series record for the books even before the 1940 World Series started. He cracked: "First time a second-division club ever represented the American League in the World Series." The Tigers had, indeed, won the pennant under Baker on almost sheer spirit. They won it despite the worst infield in the league.

The evidence is that Mr. Briggs is completely spoiled as a big league club owner. He got off to too successful a start. He took over the Detroit club from the late Frank Navin before the 1934 season started, and Manager Mickey Cochrane won him two pennants and a World Series right off the bat. Pennants came easily and quickly to Mr. Briggs.

Pennants Off Assembly Line

In fact, the supposition is now that Briggs expects his pennants to toll off the assembly line like the automobile bodies he manufactures for automobiles. He may be finding it difficult to understand why his clubs shouldn't always win the pennant. He didn't trifle with Mickey Cochrane long after Cochrane failed to win pennants.

Briggs looked on with disappointment as Cochrane failed to land the Tigers any higher than second in the two seasons following the pennant-winning years of 1934-35, and when Cochrane's club was anchored around fourth place in 1938 he fired Cochrane. He was firing the manager with the best winning percentage of any manager in the league, incidentally.

Baker got the job in midseason of 1938 and he was on thin ice when the Tigers finished no better than fifth in 1939. But Briggs displayed amazing forbearance at that point and gave Baker another contract. Baker saved his job in 1940 by winning the pennant. The flavor hasn't lasted, though. The 1941 Tigers are buried in sixth place and could finish seventh, or eighth.

It isn't Baker's fault, of course. Hank Greenberg's loss to the Army stripped the club of its greatest asset. Buck Newsom is having one of his bad years. Charley Gehringer has the miseries, Rudy York isn't hitting .300, Tommy Bridges is a once-a-week pitcher, Schoolboy Rowe is a bust, and Pat Mullin, the only good young player Baker came up with this year, broke his shoulder in midseason and had to retire.

Baker No Flaming Personality

Businessman Briggs, however, being used to success, is displaying none of the tolerance of, for example, Clark Griffith. The owner of the Nats, a hard-bitten baseball man, can appraise his own team and understand why it shouldn't win the pennant. He can understand that rebuilding a ball club is a long pull. His own pennants came at 12 and eight-year intervals. He wasn't spoiled by any immediate successes, a la Briggs.

Baker has never been any flaming personality on the ball field. Mickey Cochrane was, but that fact didn't save his job. The present manager of the Tigers is on the smooth, silent type who plays the percentages, keeps his ball players happy, and shrinks at being an exhibitionist. He's a good manager. He can fire a team up, as he proved last season, without making any on-field demonstrations.

We don't want to be a bleeding heart, though, in the cause of Baker. He's done all right. When the Tigers were winning pennants under Cochrane and Baker was a coach, he was probably the highest-paid coach in the majors. His salary and bonuses from a free-spending Briggs totaled $15,000 a year, more than some managers in the league were getting. If Briggs paid him that much as a coach, his salary as a manager for the past two seasons can only be conjectured. Baker is no pauper.

But when Baker took the job as Cochrane's successor, he was freely warned that he was sticking his neck out. He was trading the security of his coaching job for a shot at the big dough. Coach Art Fletcher, of the Yankees, could have been the Yankee manager for the taking of the job several years ago, but he demurred. He knew managers were fired much more quickly than coaches. If two pennants in five years weren't enough to hold Mickey Cochrane's job at Detroit, what could Baker anticipate?

Clifton's Storm Wins Berryville Show Title

Dark Horse's Victory Proves Surprise; Spring Hope, Big Boy Tie for Reserve

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

Berryville, Va., Aug. 15.—Out of the nowhere and into the hunter championship of the Clarke County Horse Show came Clifton's Storm, from Dr. Lewis M. Allen's breeding establishment near here today.

The gray 4-year-old is by no means obscure as to bloodlines—he is by the famed Coq Gaulois out of Lough Storm—but his background in the two-day show made him definitely a dark horse when the hunter championship preliminary rolled around.

Hitherto only three horses had been granted a spot in the figuring, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Spring Hope and The Bear and Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Big Boy, representing their Springsbury Farm nearby.

When Clifton's Storm, with Wilbur Ladd up, won the blue ribbon in the preliminary, many ringsiders suddenly realized that if the colt had enough points to qualify for that event, he might have enough to challenge the top horses. Still no one considered that his succession of victories in green classes and his final climaxing triumph in the R. Howell Page Memorial event would be sufficient to prove a serious menace—until the points were counted.

Pair Tie for Reserve

After 20 minutes' deliberation, committee members finally decided that the gray-roan youngster from the neighboring farm had 16 points and that Spring Hope and Big Boy were tied, not for the championship as was originally supposed, but for the reserve award. Each took 14 points.

While exhibitors chatted about Dr. Allen's unexpected honors, judges eyed the remaining pair for confirmation and gave the ribbon to Spring Hope, who was ridden throughout the show by Margaret Cotter.

Minus Spring Hope's anticipated championship, the Whitney contingent was not without cheer—its two open jumpers, Blue Eagle and First Night, had taken the title and the reserve in their division, making a creditable score of three out of four tri-colors for Llangollen Farm.

Five of Blue Eagle's tallies were owed directly to the disappointing knockdown-and-out class, which went to 6 feet last year and produced only four entrants currently. One of them, Miss Cotter's Rocksie, reported slightly lame so that the jump-off was between the Whitney duo and Alexis Sommaripa's Tovarich.

After Sommaripa's mount was

Hoya Coach To Lecture Wednesday

Program for 5 Days Set as Fox, O'Leary And Ehrlich Meet; Centralites Entered

Maurice (Mush) Dubofsky, popular line mentor at Georgetown University, yesterday agreed to act as "guest" coach at The Washington Post's football school starting Monday, swelling the list of local grid standouts who will lecture and demonstrate at the affair.

Dubofsky, the Hoyas' former All-Eastern guard, will appear at the Post school at Eastern High on Wednesday, following appearances of Phil Fox, Eastern coach, and Central's Coach Hardy Pierce the two previous days. He will speak on the subject he knows best, considering his own college career and the stellar forward walls he has developed at Georgetown—line play.

"Faculty" Convenes

Meanwhile, the local football luminaries who will undertake day-by-day teaching at the Post's first school held their last meeting before the deadline and arranged the first five days' program. With Devitt's Coach Jim O'Leary and Sam Fox, regular of the Ohio State eleven, doing the suggesting Les Ehrlich, the "baby" of the coaching crew, wrote down a daily 4 to 6 p. m. program something like this:

MONDAY—Roll call, followed by calesthenics. Then thorough instruction in "The Elements of the Charge."

TUESDAY—Roll call, followed by calesthenics. Then illustration and practice in "The Four Types of Blocks."

WEDNESDAY—Roll call, followed by calesthenics. Then instruction in "The Elements of Tackling."

THURSDAY—Roll call, followed by calesthenics. Then a recapitulation of subjects studied the first three days.

FRIDAY—Roll call, followed by calesthenics. Then demonstrations and practice in kicking and passing.

Entries Pour In

As may have been noted, setting-up exercises form an important part of each day's program. The Post's school hopes to toughen its students for the grind later on as well as give them the fundamentals of the game.

Entries continued to pile into The Post sports department yesterday, including those from four Central High players—Jim Kurz, end; Gene Dunn, back; Sid Isis, center, and Jack Emmans, back. The only qualification a youngster must have to fill out the blank below and enter the school is that he be 14 years of age or over.

Mrs. Minnix Wins British Relief Match

Mrs. A. C. Minnix won the British War Relief Tournament, an added event on the D. C. Women's Golf Association card, yesterday at Army and Navy with nines of 48 and 44 for a 92, minus 15 handicap strokes for a net 77.

Half of the $1 entry fee from 58 players went to the fund.

Mrs. Betty Meckley had little competition for the low gross award, winning with nines of 40 and 43 for an 83.

The host club supplied the next five winners, in order: Mrs. Paul Rutledge, new District tournament champion, 93—15—78; Mrs. W. E. Mackintosh, 99—21—78; Mrs. L. Y. York, 99—20—79; Mrs. E. T. King, 99—17—81, and Mrs. Joseph Foy, 106—25—81.

Mrs. W. F. Tompkins, Chevy Chase, with 93—12—81, and Mrs. S. L. Lyons, Army and Navy, 94—13—81, completed the prize winners.

Andy Farkas, Wilbur Moore, 2 Rookies Join Party in Windy City; Andy Says He's Ready

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 15.—Disguised as tourists, the California-bound Washington Redskins slipped into Chicago, the lair of the 73-0 Bears, this morning. An hour later, with a "Washington Redskin" sign displayed in the window of their special car for the first time, they chugged westward, failing by some 300 miles of contacting the Bears, who are training at Delafield, Wis., for the All-Star game.

Dick Todd, second-leading scorer for the Redskins last year, may become a definite holdout tomorrow. He has refused to sign although offered a 15 per cent raise. He has been ordered to join the Washington party tomorrow at Amarillo, Tex. Todd, however, has intimated that he will remain on his small ranch at Crowell, Tex.

Veterans Andy Farkas and Wilbur Moore, along with Rookies Frank Clair and Sam Goldman, joined the contingent at the Windy City. Farkas, weighing 212 pounds, after several weeks of training in northern Michigan, declared himself shipshape for the coming season. The former Detroit U. star, who led the league in points and touchdowns two years ago, played only five minutes last year and that in the closing stages of the championship game.

With Charlie Malone definitely retired from pro football, the Redskins do not intend to be weak at the ends. In all, they have ten ends under contract and of the dozen players comprising the group at this part of the trip to San Diego, six play that position.

Ki Aldrich, who joins the squad tomorrow at Clovis, N. Mex., with Sammy Baugh, is now regarded as a "gift" to the Redskins. He came to the Washington team in an outright trade with the Cardinals, who took Jimmy Johnston for the 1938 Texas Christian All-American. Since the deal, Johnston, who was about to be drafted, has joined the Air Corps.

Cards Acquire Pollet

St. Louis, Aug. 14 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals announced tonight that Howard Pollet, 20-year-old southpaw pitching sensation of the Texas League, had been acquired from their Houston farm and would join the Red Birds during their current trip.

Chisox Defeat Indians, Near Third Place

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The Chicago White Sox climbed to within a half game of third place in the American League tonight by defeating Cleveland, 5 to 2, before 34,879. It was their twelfth victory in 15 games.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of the Indians was banished from the field for the second time within a week during a protest of an interference decision called against Cleveland First Baseman Hal Trosky by Umpire Cal Hubbard in the seventh inning.

The Sox bunched five of their nine hits off Southpaw Al Smith in the sixth and seventh innngs to score all their runs in those two frames. Singles by Bob Kennedy and Mike Tresh followed a fumble by Shortstop Lou Boudreau and a pass for two runs in the sexth, while Myril Hoag's single and doubles by Taft Wright and Moose Solters led to three runs in the seventh.

Buck Ross allowed seven hits in turning in his third victory for the Chicagoans.

Mrs. Marion Falls was down with her putt on the eighteenth green yesterday to take first honors in the Ladies' Day "tombstone tournament" at Washington Golf and Country Club. Her score was an even 90.

At Congressional Country Club a "selective hole tourney," with one-half handicap allowance, was won by Mrs. F. G. Awalt, with 47—6—41. Boasting the same net score were Mrs. H. J. Klossner, with 50—9—41, and Mrs. C. E. Slawson, with 53—12—41.

Ben Hogan's Golf Challenge Match Set Here

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Benny Hogan and Jimmy Demaret, the Inverness four-ball champions who challenged any two golfers in the world for a match—any amount, any time and any place—will get their wish right here in Washington.

The two topnotch pro golfers will meet Craig Wood, the National Open champion, and Vic Ghezzi, the National P. G. A. titleholder, in a 36-hole match over a course to be announced. The date will be in the latter part of October.

The match will be sponsored by the District golf professionals and was announced by Wiffy Cox, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president and Congressional pro, following a meeting yesterday at Indian Spring.

Hogan is currently leading the pro money winners and is in a position to pass Sammy Snead's all-time mark of two years ago. The Hershey, Pa., professional and his colorful partner, Demaret, who has won just about everything but a major tournament, are one of the biggest drawing card teams in golf today.

Wood's appearance here will be his first since the blond shotmaker won the Open and Augusta Masters. His partner, the surprise P. G. A. titlist, is also his victim in the recent $2500 winner-take-all-match for the unofficial pro championship held in Ohio.

The match is a natural from every angle and with the current major championship titleholders as partners against the challenging Texans it will attract Nation-wide interest. With all the District pros in back of the 36-hole affair, it is assured of being a financial success.

Open Set Thursday

Cox made no announcement as to who was in back of the match, but he has been a life-long friend of both Wood and Ghezzi. Cox, Mel Shorey, Al Houghton, Gene Larkin, Al Jamison, Bob Barnett and Billy Hardy attended the meeting.

The date of the Washington Open was set for Thursday, September 4, over the 36-hole route at Indian Spring, for a purse which may reach $500. Al Houghton will announce the entry closing date and details for the dinner to follow next week.

Cox also announced other tournament dates, including two of Bob Barnett's annual events at Chevy Chase, the pro-senior October 10 and the pro-"course stormers" October 24. Pro-amateurs, at Baltimore August 25 and Woodmont October 6, have been added to the card while Cox confirmed dates for the pro-lady September 2 at Congressional, sponsored by the D. C. Women's Golf Association, a pro-amateur at Columbia September 8 and the Grosner match-play pro-am at Manor September 15, 16, 17.

Bob Muncrief Checks Tigers, Browns Win

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Rookie Bob Muncrief checked the Detroit Tigers on six hits tonight while the St. Louis Browns made a like number of flows good enough for a 6 to 1 triumph, largely because of Outfielder Joe Grace's third inning homer with two on base.

A round trip smash by Bruce Campbell in the fourth, his 12th of the year, spoiled a shutout for Muncrief who did not walk a man and allowed only one other runner to reach third as he chalked up his eighth triumph against six losses.

Dizzy Trout started on the mound for the Tigers but was replaced by Les Mueller after the third inning when the Browns pushed over four runs on three hits, including Grace's fifth circuit clout of the season.

J. J. Agnew Appointed To Ring Commission

Police Lieutenant Succeeds Maj. Brown On District Body

Lieut. John J. Agnew, of the Third Precinct, has been appointed to the District Boxing Commission to succeed retiring Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, it was announced yesterday.

Acting Police Chief Edward J. Kelly recommended the appointment.

Agnew will be the junior member of a three-man commission which includes Chairman Claude W. Owen and Thomas P. Morgan, jr.

The new commissioner has been in the District Police Department since 1924. He was an acting lieutenant in 1939 and in March the following year was made a regular lieutenant.

Following his apointment yesterday, Agnew stated, "I'm tickled to death with my new assignment. I have always been interested in boxing. I seldom miss fights here. Although I have been informed of my appointment by most everyone I've yet to hear from the District Commissioners. I guess they will officially inform me in the morning."

Agnew will be 41 years old September 25. He was born in Philadelphia and moved to Baltimore. He served two years in the United States Marines and received his honorable discharge in October 1924 and in December of the same year joined the police force.

In 1937, the new commission member threw his wholehearted support behind the boxing show for the benefit of the Police Relief Association. He has been a guiding light in the annual Police-Firemen's Track and Field Day.

Sammy Snead Leads Golfers At Rochester

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Slammin' Sammy Snead, Hot Springs, Va., posted a dazzling sub-par 66 today to lead a field of 140 shotmakers over Oak Hill's rain-sodden course in the first 18 holes of the $5,000 Times-Union Open.

Snead, battling such golfing greats as National Open Champion Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, and Little Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., top 1941 money winner, nipped three strokes from the regulation 70 in second place. Two strokes behind came pro Frank Commisso, of nearby Irondequoit, 34with 34, 35—69. Snead posted 33, 34.

Wood, out in 34 and back in 36, missed a chance for a tie with Commisso when he three-putted the seventeenth after missing a 2-footer, while Hogan, who ran into trouble on the traps, finished with two rounds of 36 for a total of 72.

Augie Nordine, Syracuse, equalled Wood's 70 to share third place.

Snead shot the first hole in par 4, holed an 18-foot putt on the 471-yard second for a birdie 3, played par to the sixth, where he made a 25-foot putt for a birdie 2, then finished the nine in regulation figures for a 33.

He stayed even with the course on the back nine until the fourteenth, where he dropped a 12-footer for another birdie 3. On the seventeenth hole he cut 4-par by a stroke and finally at home rimmed the cup and took a bogie 5.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—The New York Yankees today optioned Right-handed Pitcher Steve Peek to their Newark farm in the International League—the club for which he pitched last year. With the Yanks he won four and lost two.

Ice Palace Pinmen Win Close Match

Two brand new Men's District League teams had their initial workout last night at the Ice Palace with Jack Talbert's boys finishing on top of Tom Murray's Arlington Bowling Center Aces by the narrow margin of a single pin, the final score being 1831 to 1830. Nick Paye, the Baltimore flash, was the front runner for the Ice Palace with a 142 single which he turned into a 397 set.

Ev Gardiner, Paye's partner from the Free State, turned in a 363 set, while Jack Talbert contributed 361; Ray Parkes, 360, and Jack Perrell, 350. Elvin Shank topped the Arlington boys with a fine 399 set, although Al Wright led for game with 158. Ollie Pacini posted a 374 string; Wright, 371; Paul James, 340, and Art Crown, 320. A return match is scheduled for Arlington next week.

BOB LEAHY STARS

Bob Leahy, United States Mail Equipment No. 2, was the hot shot of the Fort Davis Commercial League, his high game of 1[illegible] and 388 top set enabling his team to take three straight from United States Mail No. 1. The C.-J. Club boys were in fine fettle and won team highs after posting scores of 588 and 1623, and took the odd tilt from H. & J. Construction despite Charlie Bocher's 359 set for the latter. Frene's 357 set sparked a sweep by Hoffer Market over the Kurtz Killers, and Danny Dennis' 140 and 337 led a two-game win by Dixie Pig over Melvin Motors in spite of Eddie Hutchinson's 361 for the losers.

Bob Bensinger Scores Upset In Md. Tennis

By the Associated Press

Mountain Lake Park, Md., Aug. 15. Edgar Alcon, of Pittsburgh, Pa., seeded second in the Western Maryland tennis tournament, bowed before Robert Bensinger, of Washington, D. C., in straight sets today.

Bensinger, seeded fourth, defeated the Pennsylvanian, 6—3, 6—1, in one of the few matches played during the day.

Ralph Weber, tournament manager, announced that today's rain would force some of the finals events to be played Sunday, rather than tomorrow.

Bensinger will meet the winner of the semifinals slash between Alro Klinetob, of Peckville, Pa., and Jack Southworth, also of Pittsburgh, in the finai. Klibetob is the defending champion, and Southworth was seeded third.

In the only women's singles match, Joy Hartman, of Pittsburgh, had taken one set, 6—1, from Hazel Bishop, of Washington, before rain forced postponement of play.

The quarter-finals round of men's doubles was completed, but no semi-finals matches were played.

Billy Jacobs and Ed LeFleur, both of Baltimore, defeated Klinetob and Adrian Hartman, of Pittsburgh, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4. Alcorn and Southworth defeated Charles Freer, of Washington, and Bensinger, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Frank Roberts and Alex Keiles, both of Baltimore, defeated Robert Albert and Al Baker, both of Baltimore, 6—2, 9—7. Fred A. Messick, of Salisbury, and Price Colvin, of Baltimore, defeated Al McCabe, of Huntington, W. Va., and Dan Silvering, of Hershey, Pa., in three sets, 2—6, 6—1, 6—3.

With only four teams entered in the women's doubles, both semifinal matches were played. Frances Bassett, of Washington, and Miss Bishop defeated Ann Smith, of Cumberland, and Frances Barry, 6—0, 6—1.

Miss Hartman and Dolly Harris, of Pittsburgh, defeated Cara Weber, of Oakland, and Virginia Hood, of Washington, 6—1, 6—1.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 15.—The stage was set tonight for the final showing of the twenty-fifth annual edition of the Casino Invitation Tennis Tournament with Don McNeill, the Nation's No. 1 player and defending champion, and Frederick Schroeder, jr., coholder of the United States doubles crown, in the starring roles.

McNeill, who hails from Oklahoma City, Okla., gained the final round with a 7—5, 6—3, 6—2 win over Jack Kramer, Los Angeles.

Schroeder, who with Kramer captured the 1940 national doubles title, clinched his berth with an upset win over Frank Parker, the Altadena, Calif., wizard, 6—4, 8—10, 6—4, 6—4.

The Kramer-Schroeder doubles team, which begins defense of their title next week at Longwood Cricket Club, were forced to come from behind to overtake the New York combine of J. Gilbert Hall and Frank J. Bowden. The score was 1—6, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2, 6—0.

McNeill and Parker, the Nation's No. 2 doubles team, advanced into the final round with a 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2 victory over Wayne Sabin, Portland, Oreg., and Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla.

Chide Wins at Cumberland to Complete $389.80 Double

Columbus Purse Taken By Last Bet

Chide Pays $17.40; Scocca Is Winning Jockey; Pushkin Finishes Second

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15.—With most of the 9,000 fans believing that the Knights of Columbus Purse was the outstanding event of the day, there were a scattered few in the crowd that were of the opinion that the most important race on the card was the second. In this race Chide, owned and operated by Harvey Norwood, completed a $389.80 daily double.

Finishing next to last in his most recent appearance, Chide was a different horse today. He was off in the first flight and raced head and head with Kitty's Rival until the latter decided that she was through for the day. Chide then drew out to a two-length lead and appeared an easy winner. However, Jockey Martinez, on Pushkin, had called on his mount and the Dulaney runner was begining to move. Danny Scocca kept at his work and brought the son of Chilhowee to the wire a length and a half before Pushkin. Kitty's Rival lasted long enough to save the show money.

The Knights of Columbus Purse, forced to be run in a sea of mud due to the downpour directly before the race, fell to the speed of G. G. Waugh, jr.'s Last Bet. The 3-year-old son of Balko took command soon after the break and led throughout the 6½ furlongs to gain the nod over J. Sand's Jungle Moon. Butcher Boy, favorite in the field of eight, got up for the short end of the purse.

Capably handled by Willie Kelly, Last Bet covered the distance over a sloppy track in 125 and returned his backers $14.90 for the usual $2 wager.

SIGNBOARD moved to the front while saving ground entering the stretch and was going away under pressure. WHITE SEA was off in the center of the pack, shot up between horses, but could not match the speed of the winner in the last sixteenth. OLYMPIAN had a good lead early and then faltered. SUN MAKER also tired from early usage. CALAIS got to the front and tired.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING; TRACK, FAST.

CHIDE raced KITTY'S RIVAL into defeat in the opening half, drew out to a good lead on the turn, but was hard ridden to stave off the closing bid of PUSHKIN. The latter was never far off the leaders and closed willingly. KITTY'S RIVAL was unable to outrun the winner in the early stages and weakened. CANROCK could not seriously threaten. BEACON QUEEN was off last and could not threaten.

SPEED DEMON, fencing faultlessly and well ridden, took command when asked and was in hand the last quarter. RUNNING POOL showed good speed on the flat, but made several bad landings. ATOLL was off last and closed ground while fencing well. MONKS SHADOW made a bad landing at the second fence and raced well thereafter. WAR CHAT showed good speed, but tired in the last half.

EASTER RABBIT took command at once, opened a long lead and coasted home. JUMELUS was in close quarters early, came between horses to get closest to the leader, but was no match for the winner. MR. JIMMIE raced well up from the start. HEZDREL did not appear to fancy the going.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. The Knights of Columbus. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:23. Winner, G. G. LAST BET, sent to the front at the break, was well rated while racing on top, responded to pressure in the last sixteenth and just lasted. JUNGLE MOON moved into contention after a quarter and was gradually wearing down the winner. BUTCHER BOY, off in a tangle, came through on the inside and closed with good speed. LINGERIE could not seriously threaten the top ones.

SIXTH RACE—About one and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:59. Winner, J. B. Royston's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDA TIME, $9.20, $4.30, $2.90; WORTHOWNING, $4.10, $2.70; PEPPERY, $2.70.

IDA TIME went to the leader with a rush, took command when asked, but was ridden out to win. WORTHOWNING was hard ridden, but could not reach the winner. PEPPERY was run out of it for three-quarters and closed with good courage. IVORY TIP came from far off the pace and closed willingly. MISS HILDUR had good speed while setting the pace, but stopped to a walk when headed.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

With every day's card drawing a Saturday crowd, it was not at all surprising when the Thursday handle established a new record for the mutuel department. The crowd, which some placed as high as 12,000, sent $166,152 through the tote. Mutuel Manager Donald Hays said he was naturally very pleased, but that it was his opinion that this mark would stand only until Saturday. Every day seems to be visitors' day here. The guest of the day was Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore. Jockey Benny Marshio, who has been riding with fair success around the Maryland half-milers, packed his tack and departed for Wheeling, W. Va. The honor of being the wake-up horse of the meeting will have to go to Black Crusade. After being rested until the current meeting, Black Crusade started in a 1¼-mile race and beat Justa Jimmie and others to set a new track mark. As though this weren't enough, the router came back Thursday, against a higher-class field, and scored impressively over the 1 1-16-mile distance. Trainer R. P. Gilette stated that he would ship his charge to Marlboro for the coming session. Following Thursday's card the jockey race was tied in a knot. Jockeys Danny Scocca and A. F. Martinez were deadlocked with 75 points apiece. Many trainers are of the opinion that Willie Kelly, who now has 65 points, will come up and beat them both. In case you hadn't noticed, it took an $800 horse to run the fastest mile and a sixteenth of the meeting. The trick was turned in by Speed Ship, racing for J. H. Bopst. I saw your old friend Bill last night. A couple of boys went down the train station hoping that the Capitol Limited would come through and sure enough it did. I started at the front of the train looknig for him and I saw some one way at the back walking toward me. I said to the boys "there's Bill now." You wonder how I knew him. Well after working with him ten years I should know his waddle. See you at Marlboro.

CLOCKER MIKE.

First race—HIGHLAND SONG seems to have the speed to take the front and it is my opinion that she will stay on the head end. SECRETA will race with the top one for a spell but likely will stop. PASO GRANDE has some fair trials.

Second race—SATIN ROYCE just missed when beaten by a head by Mardi Gras and off that record looks like the winner here. LENA GIRL ran a dull race in the role of favorite but will improve. NOTORIETY has been going well in the mornings.

Third race—BUSY TIME won here in one of the best races of the meeting and looks like a lock in this field. Needs only the right handling. MATHORA was an impressive winner last out. LITTLE SUZANNE should improve with a change in riders.

Fourth race—I'm going out on the limb here and take JUNE DATE, the come-from-behind horse of the field, to catch the speed horses in the final quarter. She finished second in her last after being last for three-eighths of a mile. ELTONHEAD and MARANDAN should fill out the picture.

Fifth race—ROMAN BOY will have the advantage of the inside post position and I think that will decide the race. DASHING DOE will be way outside if able to start, but cannot be overlooked. NEVER HOME is another with plenty of lick.

Sixth race—GIMPEY came from last to be third in the race won by GOLD SWEEP. If able to duplicate that effort I believe he will take top money. ALLEN CAID is dropping down for this race and will be dangerous. TIME SCOUT is liable to take it all if able to get postward.

Seventh race—THOA should take a long lonesome on these and I believe she will go the route. Has always favored this strip. STREAMER should go well in this field. SARANITE'S last was good.

Eighth race—KAMARI was unable to get to the front in her last race but should be able to outrun this field. SCHLEY GOREE is dropping down and may go well. SHORTS' last can be forgotten.

Best bet—GIMPEY.

Cumberland's Paddock Happy Meeting Place for Fans

"Meet me at the paddock," is the oft-heard phrase at the half-milers, where everybody knows somebody's brother who is a friend of a friend of a jockey. Typical of the homey atmosphere of the paddock at smaller tracks is the one at Cumberland. The above photo was made from the balconade of the clubhouse

"Scare Buying" Noted

The week has been an exceptionally active period for retailers, wholesalers and general business, Dun & Bradstreet said yesterday in another review.

"As sales gains surpassed those of recent weeks in such lines as cotton goods, blankets, furs, refrigerators, and silverware," the agency said, "some retailers reported the rush on women's hosiery touched off a wave of 'scare buying' in a number of staples.

"All sections of the country were having their lightest summer lull in years. Wholesale purchasing continued at record-breaking proportions. Manufacturers and wholesalers had already resorted to allotment schemes to restrict overbuying. In several lines retailers too were now beginning to set limits to the quantity each consumer might purchase.

"The margin of sales improvement for all retail lines reached a new record in the week. It was estimated to have spread to an average of 22 to 30 per cent over a year ago."

The review found increases were more uniform regionally than had been the case earlier this year with Southern and Midwestern areas remaining in the lead percentage-wise. In the major sections increases over a year ago were: New England, 25 to 28 per cent, East, 20 to 27, Middle West and South, 24 to 30, Southwest, 23 to 32, Northwest, 18 to 21, and Pacific Coast 24 to 27.

Small Business Man Faces Hard Times, Says Heimann

Entangled in Many Regulations Aimed At 'Big Brother'

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 15.—Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, said today that while small businesses had found hard going in the past decade, "it will be even tougher in the years ahead."

In a review of business, Heimann listed among reasons for his prediction increasing governmental rules and regulations and local, State and Federal taxes.

"The attempts to help the small businessman have become either boomerangs of mere 'lip service,'" Heimann said, commenting "it is no balm to the small businessman to realize that his troubles come from an effort to save him."

Tangled in Red Tape

"Big business finds it costly to comply with the many rules and regulations but big business can have a staff to handle the multiplicity of detail," Heimann said. "Not so with the smaller businessman. His volume of business does not permit him to engage many specialties. He worries through, as best he can, about the details of all these acts and, sometimes, he has become discouraged.

"Then the threat of war comes along. We decide to get on a war basis. The spending of billions means volume placement. The small businessman doesn't get many Government orders, not because the Government doesn't care to give them to him but simply because there is haste and waste in an 'emergency' and he is overlooked.

Hard Times Ahead

"So the small businessman, beset with priorities, sees his usual business curtailed. Nondefense items in which he usually deals are limited as to production. The rules and regulations he knows were intended to regulate and control his big brother in business have unfortunately enveloped him. . . .

"This is not argument against the wisdom of defense. It is entirely designed to emphasize a sincere belief that unless in the months ahead smaller business organizations can find a way out, have apportioned to them a larger portion of defense contracts, the mortality among such organizations will be great."

Auto Production In Week Mounts To 45,550 Units

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that car and truck production this week would total 45,550 units. Last week assemblies numbered 41,795. A year ago this week they totaled 20,475.

The increase this week was attributed to a stepping up of schedules by companies engaged in initial production of 1942 models.

Commenting upon credit restrictions on automotive sales, Ward's said a "very severe impairment of deliveries could result if stringent terms are adopted." It estimated that three out of every five cars sold are time-financed.

Willys Overland Reports a Profit

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—Consolidated net income of $111,442 was earned by Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., after all charges and provision for Federal income taxes at existing rates, in the three months ended June 30, Joseph W. Frazer, company president, reported today. The earnings compare with a net loss of $182,047 in the comparable 1940 period.

Consolidated net sales for the quarter totaled $5,853,960, a 60 per cent increase over sales of $3,658,767 in the corresponding period last year.

As of August 12, the company had unfilled defense orders totaling $30,335,000.

Utility Stockholders' Meeting Is Postponed

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 15 (AP).—The U. S. District Court clerk's office announced today a stockholders meeting of North American Light & Power Co. scheduled for August 21 had been postponed by agreement of counsel until October 21, pending adjudication of a Securities and Exchange Commission request for an injunction directed against the North American Co.

The SEC has asked the court to restrain North American, parent concern in a vast utility system embracing Light & Power, from voting its stock for dissolution of the subsidiary.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—After wavering most of the session, wheat prices today managed to close at the best levels of the day, which were ½-⅞ cent higher than yesterday's final quotations.

Late mill buying and short covering and evaporation of hedging and profit-taking sales evident earlier in the day contributed to the market's closing firmness. There were no trade developments upon which to base new buying, however. September wheat closed at $1.12¾-$1.12¾; December, $1.13⅞-$1.14, and May $1.19¼-$1.19¾, all within about 3 cents of the four-year peaks registered early yesterday.

Corn finished ⅝@¾ cent higher; September, 78⅛; December, 81¼@81¾; oats, ⅛@¼ up; rye, ¼@⅝ higher; soybeans, 2¼@2½ up, and lard, 5@10 higher.

Traders said the market's inability to establish a definite course was due largely to unwillingness of many interests to assume new positions because of uncertainty regarding the international situation as well as certain aspects of the farm program, particularly price ceiling and wheat stocks freezing legislation.

Tax Outlook Uncertain

Every day that Congress delays in the matter of a tax bill means a loss of revenue to the Treasury. Income taxes, of course, can be delayed for months, since these will not be collected until next March. But the excise taxes, designed to raise close to a billion annually, are collected currently. The recommendation has been made that excises and capital stock taxes be separated from the general revenue measure and rushed through immediately in order to catch needed revenue. If this is done, all need of haste would be removed, and the uncertainty over other taxes would remain for a number of months.

Bank Earnings to Rise

The basis for the indicated gains in earnings of banks in the first half of 1941 was the large increase in earning assets—loans and investments. During the period, total loans of reporting member banks rose 11.3% and total investments expanded by 10.8%. Moreover, defense loans are still being made in large volume and ordinary commercial loan volume will continue large, because manufacturers' inventories are the highest on record and because of the high rate of business activity in general. Banks will also continue to absorb some of the Government's new security issues to aid in the national defense effort. Net earnings of banks for 1941, therefore, should be at least 10% higher than in 1940.

Defense Spending

National defense spending, the key to the progress of the armament program, increased sharply in July. Defense expenditures for the month totaled $940,000,000, which compares with $808,000,000 in June. This upswing, which brought spending to an annual rate of $11,600,000,000, still leaves much to be desired. Even if the official rate of defense spending, estimated by the Budget Bureau at $15,500,000,000 for this fiscal year is reached, it would mean that we would start the next fiscal year on July 1, 1943, with more than half of the present defense program still to go.

Soap Production

Sales of soap in the first half of 1941 were about 25 per cent above a year before. As part of this gain probably represented inventory stocking, the increase may be modified in the final half, but the total for the year should be well above that for 1940. Soap prices have been increased moderately so far this year, and further upward adjustments are likely if raw material costs advance further. Profit margins should be well maintained, and the combination of sizably larger sales and probable absence of inventory losses should lift earnings above those for 1940.

Plastic Will Replace Metal Shoe Lace Tips

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 15 (AP).—Half a million pounds of metal, mostly tin, may be saved for defense this year through substitution of plastic in those little metal tips on shoe laces, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. reported today.

It said more than 500 million laces would use plastic instead of metal for the tips that are so tiny you never notice them until they're gone and you try to lace your shoes.

One pound of plastic will replace more than three pounds of metal, the du Pont Co. said.

Russia Ranks Third In World Auto Output

World production of motor vehicles, the Commerce Department says, increased 10 per cent to 5,554,312 units in 1940. The United States accounted for 4,469,354. Canada was second with 222,984, and Russia third with 180,000.

New Processes Evolving From Defense Rush

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—Changes in manufacturing methods to speed armament output will be helpful to American industry in the long run, the Cleveland Trust Co.'s monthly business bulletin declared today.

The progressive conversion of peacetime machinery to defense production was seen as impelling development of new materials, improvement of productive methods, development of new mass production procedure and increasing faith in national capacities to cope with industrial problems.

Auto Industry Cited

"Adaptation of existing industrial facilities to produce munitions has been under way more than a year, but the process only recently has become really important in our economy," the bulletin observed.

"It is most conspicuous in the automobile industry, but it will profoundly affect scores of other industries, necessitating readjustments, impairing corporate earnings and causing a good deal of temporary and vexatious unemployment. One of its chief features will be shortages of materials.

"Despite defense work, industrial production in July was 116 per cent of normal, equaling the highest monthly figure for the boom year of 1929. If production is maintained at last month's level the rest of this year, it will average 12.5 per cent above normal—highest annual average since the previous peak year of 1916 when the average was 13.8 per cent above normal.

Century Record Seen

"If production increases 1 per cent each month between now and the year's end, the 1941 average will be the highest in the last century," the bank added.

The time now has been reached, the bulletin said, when production of war materials must forge ahead at the expense of nonessential goods, and curtailment in these lines will offset partly the gains still to be made in the defense industries. Because of this and the approach to full employment, it predicted further increases in total production would be at slower rates than during the past two years.

Rail Earnings Rise Sharply In Six Months

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 15.—The sharp upturn in railroad business was reflected today in earnings reports for the first six months of this year, all well ahead of 1940 figures.

Pennsylvania Railroad reported first half net income of $17,110,378, equal to $1.30 a share, compared with revised 1940 first half net of $13,443,637 or $1.02 a share. The June net was $5,824,140 against $3,401,489 in June, 1940.

The Santa Fe system showed a net income of $7,701,498 for the first half of 1941, equal after preferred dividends to $1.89 a common share, compared with a net loss of $1,872,562 in the like period of 1940. Its June net was $2,360,885 in 1941 against $605,243 in June, 1940.

The Wabash was about $3,300,000 better off in 1941 than in 1940. For the first six months its net income was $897,331, compared with a net loss of $2,451,734 in the first half of 1940. June, 1941, net income was $263,570 against a June, 1940, net loss of $566,967.

Seaboard Air Line Railway had a similar experience. Its first half net income was $571,141 against a 1940 first half loss of $2,515,984. June, 1941, net was $72,412 and June, 1940, net loss was $778,638.

Clinchfield Railroad showed a net profit of $1,656,701 for the first half of 1941, against a net income of $804,474 in the first half of 1940. Comparable June figures were $342,019 in 1941 against $18,489 in 1940.

Ann Arbor Railroad made $88,721 in the first half of 1941, compared with a loss of $104,093 in the corresponding part of 1940. June figures were net income $35,837 in 1941 and net loss $23,848 in 1940.

Viscose to Boost Pay Rates of 1100 At Front Royal

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—Eleven hundred employes in the American Viscose Corporation plant here will receive wage increases August 24 of 2, 3 and 4 cents an hour on various kinds of operations, A. R. Woodard, representative of the Textile Workers Union of America (C. I. O.), announced today.

Other increases will become effective February 1, 1942, bringing the wage rate in the plant here more nearly to the level prevailing in the other six plants of the corporation, the announcement said.

Wage increases were negotiated on Tuesday in offices of the corporation at Wilmington, Del., and the local union ratified the increases last night.

The present general contract between the corporation and the union will expire March 1, 1942, and negotiations for a new contract will open prior to that date, Woodard said.

Swift and Cudahy Boost Hourly Pay

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Two major packing companies—Swift and Cudahy—announced today that hourly wages of employes had been hiked 5 cents an hour with the increase retroactive to Aug. 11.

Following similar action a few days ago by Armour and Wilson, Swift announced that 5,000 employes in the Chicago plant would be given an increase of 5 cents an hour. Company officials said that 43 other Swift plants would have to take "local action."

Cudahy announced that all male employes in 11 packing plants, mostly in the Middle West, would get a raise of 5 cents an hour; all skilled help 5 cents increase; and all unskilled female help 6 cents an hour more. The company employs approximately 10,000 persons.

Officials of both companies said they could not tell how much the increase would add to their yearly payrolls.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Cotton futures values declined 15 to 30 cents a bale today in a session that saw prices fluctuate nervously.

The uneasiness was attributed to fears of possible price reaction if President Roosevelt should veto the cotton-wheat loan stocks freezing bill.

Trade circles said the reports of insect infestation in the South indicated considerable damage, while additional rain might seriously affect the new crop.

Worth Street business was reported steady, but in modest volume, with resultant mill purchases of raw cotton. Indications were, however, that mill purchases for future delivery already equaled supplies for five or six months at the current rate of consumption, trade sources said.

Exports Thursday, 1,794 bales; season so far, 27,619; port receipts, 7,156; port stocks, 3,168,996.

Sugar Futures

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—World sugar futures fluctuated widely today and closed unchanged to 5½ points lower on sales of 28,500 tons.

Early losses were wiped out in a rally based on reports Britain had bought 25,000 tons of Cuban raw sugar at 1.65 cents a pound, but profit-taking knocked prices down again.

World sugar closed September, 1.62½; December, 1.67½; March, 1.70; May, 1.72; July, 1.72½.

Stocks Edge Lower in Light Selling; Bethlehem Steel Sets New 1941 Low

New York, Aug. 15.—Light selling put the stock market on the down-grade today after an early attempt to extend Thursday's feeble rally encountered opposition.

The half-hearted upturn of the preceding session, while it was the first on average since July 29, failed to impress analysts who had expected more of a technical rebound. Offerings, consequently, began to seep into the list before midday and, at the close, leaders were off fractions to a point or so.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite lost .4 of a point at 42.7, where it was back to around the levels of early July. The day's drop duplicated that of last Saturday. Transfers of 385,470 shares were the smallest for any five-hour stretch since July 1. They compared with 415,260 the day before.

Wall Street still could find scant speculative motivation in the Roosevelt-Churchill accord. A little bearishness was thought to have cropped up on the recommendation of the United States Chamber of Commerce to the Senate Finance Committee that the present tax bill be boosted 1 billion to 4½ billion dollars. Some pessimism was attributed to the reported Nazi sweep in the Ukraine and persistent Far Eastern tension.

A number of good earning statements were helpful, but heavy tax provisions clouded many of these. Moderate cheer was derived from business items, mainly another sharp jump in retail spending throughout the Nation.

This week's automotive production increased a shade as makers began work on new 1942 models, but the question of restricted output because of lack of materials continued to handicap stocks in this group. Steels once more were impeded by the growing scrap shortage.

Among shares, Bethlehem Steel conceded 1¼ points at 67½, a new 1941 low. Others in the retreating division were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, American Can, Santa Fe, Great Northern, American Smelting and Texas Corporation.

Aircrafts were up most of the day on good profits showings but Douglas, Boeing and Glenn Martin finished a trifle in arrears. United Aircraft held a minor gain, as did Richfield Oil and Climax Molybdenum.

Downward drifters in the curb were N. J. Zinc, Pennroad, American Gas, Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, Phoenix Securities and American Cyanamid "B." Volume here was around 80,000 shares versus 72,000 yesterday.

The majority of corporate bonds were on the offering side of today's market and at the close declines of fractions to a point were plentiful. A few low-priced rails contested the trend.

U. S. Treasuries joined in the sliding movement, although most issues lost only a minor fraction over the counter and a few of the longer-term loans bounced up around a half point on the stock exchange.

Scattered strength was found in the foreign dollar department, notably among the Japanese municipals and Italians, although here, too, the major trend leaned to the off side.

Transfers of $5,855,700, par value, were a shade ahead of Thursday's $5,693,800. Of the five groups in the Associated Press averages three—rails, utilities and foreigns—were down and the low-yields and industrials were unchanged.

Nervous Moves Tend Upward In Key Staples

By the Associated Press

Prices of unfettered commodity futures fluctuated nervously yesterday in uncertainty over price controls, quotas and Presidential intention toward the cotton-wheat loan stocks freezing bill, closing a shade higher.

At Chicago grains, unable to establish a trend, finised fractionally higher on late buying. Wheat gained ½ to ⅞ cent a bushel and corn ⅝ to ¾ cent.

Cotton was equally jittery, closing 15 to 30 cents a bale lower after losses of nearly $1 a bale and smaller net gains. Cottonseed oil finished 0.10 to 0.17 of a cent a pound higher.

Coffee trading was quiet, Santas futures losing a shade. Wool tops were 0.1 to 0.3 of a cent a pound lower and cocoa, one of the few other markets free of restraint, lost about one-tenth of a cent a pound.

World sugar futures, after rising sharply on reports Britain had bought a large consignment of Cuban sugar, lost steam and finished unchanged to .055 cent a pound lower.

The Associated Press index of 35 cash staples declined to 90.51 per cent of the 1926 average from 90.54 per cent the day before.

2 Top-Seeded Stars Win in Public Tennis

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Aug. 15.—The two top-seeded favorites in the men's singles of the National Public Parks and Playgrounds Tennis Championships, Charles Shostrom, Chicago, and Willis Anderson, Los Angeles, made impressive entries today into tomorrow's semifinal matches.

Anderson, seeded second, hardly extended himself in one of the most accurately played matches of the tournament, and eliminated John Clark, Chicago, from the quarter-finals, 6—1, 6—1, 6—1, while Shostrom, seeded first, although finding a more stubborn opponent, never was in danger in beating Norman MacDonald, Minneapolis, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

In the men's championship, the powerhouse team of Alex George and Leonard Prosser, Kansas City Mo., became a strong favorite for the title tomorrow by walloping an experienced team, McLaney and his fellow townsman, Dr. A. J. Italiano, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2. Good as they were, the Louisianans never had a chance with the smashing Kansas City duo. The other team of finalists is Ed Olson and Dr. W. F. Widen, Minneapolis, who eliminated George Rushton and Robert Baker, Niagara Falls, N. Y., 36, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3, in an erratically played match.

and scored on a two-bagger to left by Peacock. Johnson bounced a single through the box for the Sox's second run of the inning.

There wasn't much to the Sox's third-inning run. Joe Cronin simply belted his twelfth homer of the year, a full-blown wallop, into the center-field stands with one out and the bases empty. After that, they belonged to Carrasquel.

The Nats blew scoring chances in all of the first three innings but they took a one-run hunk out of the Sox's lead in the fourth. George Archie inspired the run with a lusty two-bagger against the left field wall. Al Evans got him home with his second straight single to left.

There was one out when Johnson contracted base-on-balls, poisoning in the Nats' big fifth inning. He walked Cramer and then he walked Lewis and then he walked Travis to fill the bases. Then Mickey Vernon worked him for a 3-and-2 count and slugged a single to center. Second Baseman Bobby Doerr got his glove on the ball, but that's all. Two runs scored and Travis galloped to third.

The Nats scored their third run of the inning quite by accident. Archie accidently left his bat in the way while trying to back away from a pitch, and the result was a weak grounder to Tabor. Travis scored from third while Tabor threw to Doerr for a force play on Vernon. Archie beat Doerr's throw to first for a futile double-play attempt, but eventually was tagged out when he rounded the base too far. The folks were saying that Archie thought there were three out when he nonchalantly started toward second.

Anyway, the Nats had a 4-3 lead, and they improved it quickly against Mike Ryba, who had taken up the Boston pitching after Vernon's single in the fifth. Jimmy Bloodworth beat out a hit to Doerr and dashed to second when Doerr threw past Foxx. With two out, George Case fetched him home with a double to left.

In the seventh, the Nats got a quick run. Buddy Lewis banged a three-bagger to the base of the wall in right center with none out, and a bit later Vernon moved him home with a fly to Williams. It was a close play at the plate.

District Softball Pairings Are Made For Title Tourney

Softball heads of Washington, in one of their most peaceful meetings in years, last night arranged pairings for the District of Columbia Softball Association tournament which will start Monday at Ballston Stadium and continue throughout the week on alternate nights at Arlington park and Washington Softball Stadium.

The first night's program, launching a city-wide meet which will decide the District of Columbia representative in the national tourney next month, will find Manhattan Auto and Radio, of the Sunday Morning League, facing the G. P. O. Binders; and Senate, of the Edgewood League, tangling with either the U. S. Aggies or F. B. I., depending on the outcome of the United States Government circuit play. First game will be at 8 p.m.

Shifting over to Washington Stadium, Tuesday night's card calls for a meeting of Yellow Cab, of the Prince Georges League, and Central Branch, B. C. W., of the Sport Center A-2 League; and of Standard Linen, of the Sport Center A-1 League, and Westminster, of the Southwest League.

Brewers to Meet Little Tavern Nine

Rain ended all hope of starting the Brewer-Little Tavern playoff for The Washington Post-Industrial League championship yesterday, so a pair of games will be staged today. Starting time will be 2:30 and the site the East Ellipse.

In case of a split in today's twin bill, the first and second half winners, respectively, will decide matters in a third clash Monday. Thus it will be necessary to postpone the opening of the local National Amateur Baseball Federation tourney until Tuesday.

Little Tavern, the dark horse in this year's Post League play, is expected to send Wheatley and Jennings to the mound today, opposing Marnane and Lacey.

Desire Game Tomorrow

The Washington Aztecs, unlimited nine, are seeking a Sunday engagement. Their manager may be reached at Metropolitan 1708.

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—When you speak of the Army playing football this fall, you'll have to be more specific because West Point won't be the only service team.

St. Mary's University of San Antonio, Tex., will play here October 5 and the University of Toledo is booked for November 27. The barracks team will oppose Bradley Tech November 15 at Peoria, Ill.

Poland Slated To Work Out Here Monday

Bill Poland, Jack Kearns' heavyweight prospect, who meets Eddie Blunt in the feature bout of Promoter Joe Turner's all-star show Wednesday week, will open training here Monday for the 25-round match. Poland may locate in an open-air training camp nearby, possibly Tom O'Donnell's Griffith Farms.

Blunt is also expected to report here Monday for drills slated at Turner's Arena. The North Carolina Negro holds victories over Buddy Baer, Abe Simon and Tony Musto. He is a rugged fighter and weighs around 225 pounds.

Next week will be a busy one for the principals of the August 27 show. All will be on hand to swing into training. Phil Furr, who meets Al Franklin in a 12-rounder, has been working out for the past week at the arena and appears in top shape.

Buddy Scott, scheduled for a 10-round bout against Lee Savold, also has been getting in his practice licks at the arena.

Pat Comiskey and Claudio Villar are listed for a 10-round match. Ben Morez will meet Jabo Kenner in a six and Oscar Wright will face Kid Howie in a 4-rounder. Sixty-seven rounds of boxing are scheduled.

Palace A. C. Wins Twin Bill

With victories over Village Motors and the Arlington Maccabees in a double-header yesterday, Palace A. C. retained its lead in the Washington-Virginia Baseball League. Nine runs in the first inning of the opener earned a 12-3 edge for Palace, and it staged another 9-run rally in the third inning of the finale to win, 14-3.

A special meeting of the league will be held at 8 p. m. tonight at Ballston Stadium to revise the second-half schedule. The withdrawal of Mattos A. C. and the Arlington Dodgers made the change necessary.

Lincolnettes Play Cardoza Girls In Softball Today

Another colorful softball program will be staged at Washington Softball Stadium this afternoon, beginning at 1:30, when the Cardoza Jitterbugs, formerly the Southwest Brown Bombers, face their rivals from the Southeast, the Lincolnettes.

Three weeks ago these two teams played to an enthusiastic audience. These girls play the game with more zest and vim than any group which has played softball in Washington in recent years. As a result many nicknames have been attached to the participants.

The Lincolnettes boast as their stars "Sis" Proctor, "Liz" Shorter, "Butterfly" Butler, while the Cardozas will rely to a large extent on "Dopey" Brooks, a spinball pitcher of parts; "Hotshot" Crawford and "Shorty" Shorter.

Barry Appointed To U. S. C. Post

had the confidence in me to give me this appointment.

"Howard Jones and the Trojan varsity squad over a long period of years established a tradition of clean, hard-fighting football that I will make every effort to maintain."

Barry, under the present set-up, will continue as basketball and baseball coach. The assistant football coaching staff, Bob McNeish as backfield coach, Julie Bescos for the ends and Gus Shaver in charge of the freshman team, will remain intact.

A line coach will be engaged to replace Jess Cravath, who left Southern California for the San Francisco University head coaching position.

Barry will begin active football plans August 23. Practice opens September 8. He indicated little change would be made in Trojan tactics. Jones and Barry worked together in spring training and plans were virtually set for the 1941 campaign.

Burnett Defeats Malone, 2 and 1, At Indian Spring

Volney G. Burnett, the Maryland State amateur champion who is now after the Indian Spring Club title, played near-par golf yesterday as he advanced to the semifinals with a 2 and 1 victory over Charley Malone.

Burnett was one down playing the ninth hole, despite two earlier birdies, but he knocked a wood shot within 2 feet of the cup to birdie the ninth and holed a 10-footer on the tenth for another birdie. He made a 15-footer for a par on the eleventh as Malone three-putted, for a two-up lead.

eliminated by two refusals Blue Eagle, ridden by Roland Ridgeway, and First Night, with Norman Haymaker up, remained to jump off at 5½ feet. Considering the strenuous task before them, the two riders decided that as long as it was all in the same stable, they might just as well toss a coin. Blue Eagle won, and hence outpointed his stablemate for the championship.

Although the show was chiefly a three-way battle between Dr. Allen's youngster, the Whitneys and the Greenhalghs, the breeding classes were of customary importance to fanciers as Mrs. Lily A. Livingston's colt by Majority Rule took the event for thoroughbred foals over Peach Brothers' chestnut son of Gray Coat. Majority Rule was winner of the stallion class yesterday.

11 U. S. Fliers Among 22 Lost In British Crash

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 15.—The R. A. F. transatlantic ferry command disclosed today the death of 21 airmen —11 of them Americans—and the Right Hon. Arthur Purvis, Britain's American purchasing agent, in the crash of an America-bound plane almost identical with that which took the same number of lives last Sunday.

At first, 12 United States fliers were listed among the dead in the second crash, which occurred shortly after the takeoff Thursday. Tonight, however, it was said in London that Capt. Joseph C. Mackey, of Kansas City, had not been aboard, he having been confused with a Canadian radio officer, G. W. Mackay, who was one of those killed.

Capt. Mackey was the only survivor of a crash last February in which Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, and two other persons were killed in Newfoundland near the outset of a transatlantic hop.

He returned to the ferry flying after recovering from injuries. His present location was not disclosed.

Both Crashed in Takeoff

(Capt. Mackey's wife in Montreal received notice Friday morning that he had been killed in a plane crash in the United Kingdom.)

[Friday night, however, Mrs. Mackey received official word from the ferry command that her husband was safe and alive. The officials apologized for the mistake but did not explain it.]

Seven Americans were killed in the Sunday crash, which was so similar to that of Thursday.

Both planes crashed while taking off for America, carrying men to ferry bombers back to the R. A. F. In each crash 22 lives were lost.

Flying officer E. W. Watson, of Torrence, Calif., was the only man taken alive from the second plane after it hit the ground on the takeoff and burst into flames. He died later in a hospital.

The seven Americans and 15 British victims of last Sunday night's crash were buried this afternoon in a single grave beside a little church on a lonely hillside not far from where they died. They were given Naval honors, and the coffins were draped with the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack.

American Victims Listed

Capt. A. C. Earl, Huntington, W. Va.

Capt. M. D. Dilley, Kansas City.

Capt. J. J. Kerwin, Oakland, Calif.

Capt. E. Bonding, Merrick, N. Y.

Capt. M. J. Wetzel, Jamesburg, N. J.

Capt. Gerald Hull, Royal Oak, Mich.

Capt. E. Hamel, Braintree, Mass.

Capt. P. F. Lee, jr., Frederick, Md.

Flying Officer W. L. Trimble, Fort Worth, Tex.

Flying Officer E. W. Watson, Torrence, Calif.

Flight Engineer R. F. Davis, Seattle, Wash.

Purvis, who was 51, was a prominent Canadian industrialist appointed by the British government last January to head the supply council. A month before he had been named to the Privy Council in recognition of his work as director general of the British Purchasing Commission.

In Washington, his aides estimated that he had contracted for more than 3 billion dollars' worth of cash purchases and had played an important part in arranging orders for billions more of supplies under the lease-lend law.

Court Upholds FCC Power Of Subpena

The authority of the Federal Communications Commission to compel witnesses to appear before FCC hearings was upheld yesterday by Justice James M. Morris, of the District Court.

Deciding the first case in which the broad powers of the FCC have been challenged, Justice Morris commented:

"The surest safeguard against uninformed and arbitrary action is to be found in securing information from those best qualified to know the results of any Governmental action."

Justice Morris ordered James G. Stahlman, Nashville publisher and a member of the American Newspaper Publishers Association radio committee, to obey an FCC summons to appear at a hearing on the FCC policy toward broadcasting license applications filed by publishers.

Stahlman had refused to obey the subpena, contending that the hearing was unauthorized by law. If the proposed policy discriminated either for or against publishers who wanted to start radio stations, Stahlman claimed, the policy would be unlawful because of the discrimination. Therefore, hearings which contemplated such a policy would be unlawful.

In rejecting this contention, Justice Morris said "no presumption is to be indulged that any action will be taken that is unconstitutional . . . The inquiry should be conducted fairly and reasonably, and it must be presumed that it will be."

Dr. Croissant, Educator, Dies In Maryland

CROISSANT

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Monday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Listen!

with Glynn

Jessica Dragonette, who, it's fairly safe to bet, has been heard more often by more people than any other singer in the world, takes over a new job tonight. She's to appear as the new, permanent solo star of "Saturday Night Serenade," which you'll hear over WJSV at 8:45 p.m.

As presumably most of you know, Miss Dragonette is one of radio's pioneer entertainers, if not the only one who began when radio began and who's still going strong. She got a contract to sing over the airwaves away back in 1926 and such was her popularity and appeal that for ten years from then on, she was never without a sponsor and, what's more, never a week went by that Miss Dragonette wasn't heard on the radio at least once in all that time.

She figures that she has sung more than 2,000 songs, classical, folk and popular, besides doing fully 100 full-length performances of operettas and such.

Miss Dragonette attempted to retire a few years ago—the report is that she had found her radio work eminently profitable—but found that she didn't find much pleasure in not singing. So she went on an extended concert tour of the Western Hemisphere, where again she did very well, so well, in fact, that she's been appearing in weekly concerts ever since.

But there must be something about radio, Miss Dragonette's back.

Army Calls Nurse

Second Lieut. Kathryn Agnes McGrath, Reserve Nurse, 2127 California Street Northwest, has been ordered to active Army duty for a minimum period of a year. She has been assigned to dut yat Fort Meade.

Contract Bridge

♠ Q 9 7 5
♡ Q 10 6 3
◇ J 10 9 7

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 NT.	Pass	?

What call do you make?

The Answer

You shouldn't be too eager for a no-trump contract because of the singleton club. Bid two diamonds to see if partner can respond in one of the major suits, both of which you can support. If he passes two diamonds, you may be in the best declaration.

Naval Hospital Blood Donor Drive To Be Extended

A Red Cross recruiting campaign for donors for the Naval Hospital Blood Donor Center will be spread to the surrounding Maryland and Virginia counties in the next few weeks, the District chapter said yesterday.

The campaign will attempt to bring the number of donors registering in this vicinity to at least 150 a week, Otto S. Lund, manager of the D. C. chapter, said. The program, which has been carried on in the city only for several months, already has brought 800 registrants to the center.

Carried on in connection with the national defense program, the campaign calls for the registering of donors with the Red Cross chapters.

Four Park Service Outings Are Set For Tomorrow

Activities including an excursion to Sugar Loaf Mountain, near Frederick, Md.; barge trips and hiking along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and a bird walk in Glover-Archbold Park are scheduled for tomorrow by the National Park Service.

On the outing to Sugar Loaf Mountain special buses will leave 1416 F Street Northwest at 9:30 a. m.

Horse-drawn barges will leave Chain Bridge at 9 a. m. and Carderock, Md., at 2 p. m. Tickets may be obtained between 3 and 5 p. m. today at 1416 F Street Northwest. The hiking contingent will organize at 9:30 a. m. at Old Anglers Inn and the bird walk will be from 6:30 to 8 a. m.

Commissioners Act To Consolidate Inspection Offices

To facilitate operations and accommodate persons seeking construction permits, the Commissioners yesterday ordered divisions of the department of inspection consolidated and quartered on one floor of the District Building. Heretofore, the department's units have been scattered throughout the building causing considerable confusion.

The consolidation will be made by moving the Public Utilities Commission into offices formerly occupied by the Health Department and the inspection bureau into the P. U. C. quarters on the first floor.

Present divisions of the department—building, plumbing, electrical, smoke and boiler—will become one unit known as the Department of Building Inspection.

The consolidation was recommended by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Van Truffle—we haven't a thing in old barns that you could renovate! —How about an old abandoned penthouse?"

Listen! with Glynn

Jessica Dragonette, who, it's fairly safe to bet, has been heard more often by more people than any other singer in the world, takes over a new job tonight. She's to appear as the new, permanent solo star of "Saturday Night Serenade," which you'll hear over WJSV at 8:45 p.m.

As presumably most of you know, Miss Dragonette is one of radio's pioneer entertainers, if not the only one who began when radio began and who's still going strong. She got a contract to sing over the airwaves away back in 1926 and such was her popularity and appeal that for ten years from then on, she was never without a sponsor and, what's more, never a week went by that Miss Dragonette wasn't heard on the radio at least once in all that time.

She figures that she has sung more than 2,000 songs, classical, folk and popular, besides doing fully 100 full-length performances of operettas and such.

Miss Dragonette attempted to retire a few years ago—the report is that she had found her radio work eminently profitable—but found that she didn't find much pleasure in not singing. So she went on an extended concert tour of the Western Hemisphere, where again she did very well, so well, in fact, that she's been appearing in weekly concerts ever since.

But there must be something about radio, Miss Dragonette's back.

Contract Bridge

With neither side vulnerable, you are sitting West and hold these cards:

♠ Q 9 7 5
♡ Q 10 6 5
◇ J 10 9 7

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 NT.	Pass	?

What call do you make?

The Answer

You shouldn't be too eager for a no-trump contract because of the singleton club. Bid two diamonds to see if partner can respond in one of the major suits, both of which you can support. If he passes two diamonds, you may be in the best declaration.

Naval Hospital Blood Donor Drive To Be Extended

A Red Cross recruiting campaign for donors for the Naval Hospital Blood Donor Center will be spread to the surrounding Maryland and Virginia counties in the next few weeks, the District chapter said yesterday.

The campaign will attempt to bring the number of donors registering in this vicinity to at least 150 a week, Otto S. Lund, manager of the D. C. chapter, said. The program, which has been carried on in the city only for several months, already has brought 800 registrants to the center.

Carried on in connection with the national defense program, the campaign calls for the registering of donors with the Red Cross chapters.

Four Park Service Outings Are Set For Tomorrow

Activities including an excursion to Sugar Loaf Mountain, near Frederick, Md.; barge trips and hiking along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and a bird walk in Glover-Archbold Park are scheduled for tomorrow by the National Park Service.

On the outing to Sugar Loaf Mountain special buses will leave 1416 F Street Northwest at 9:30 a. m.

Horse-drawn barges will leave Chain Bridge at 9 a. m. and Carderock, Md., at 2 p. m. Tickets may be obtained between 3 and 5 p. m. today at 1416 F Street Northwest. The hiking contingent will organize at 9:30 a. m. at Old Anglers Inn and the bird walk will be from 6:30 to 8 a. m.

Commissioners Act To Consolidate Inspection Offices

To facilitate operations and accommodate persons seeking construction permits, the Commissioners yesterday ordered divisions of the department of inspection consolidated and quartered on one floor of the District Building. Heretofore, the department's units have been scattered throughout the building causing considerable confusion.

The consolidation will be made by moving the Public Utilities Commission into offices formerly occupied by the Health Department and the inspection bureau into the P. U. C. quarters on the first floor.

Present divisions of the department—building, plumbing, electrical, smoke and boiler—will become one unit known as the Department of Building Inspection.

The consolidation was recommended by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Pepco to Spend 30 Millions in Next 3 Years

50,000 KILOWATT STEAM TURBINES AT PEPCO'S BUZZARD'S POINT PLANT

Washington's consumption of electricity is not merely the greatest ever but it has reached a point where, no sooner is one expansion move executed than another is found necessary.

Last fall the Potomac Electric Power Co. placed in operation at its Buzzard's Point plant a 50,000-kilowatt turbo-generator. It was believed that this equivalent of 66,000 horses would be adequate to accommodate increased demand.

Hardly had this extra juice begun to flow, however, than another generator of the same capacity had to be ordered. Then another. And another.

A huge addition to the Buzzard's Point station, adjoining the Army War College, is being erected for the three new machines. Pepco is embarked upon the most ambitious construction program in its history, one which will have cost upward of 30 million dollars before the end of 1943. By that time the combined generating capacity of the Benning and Buzzard's Point stations will be 78 per cent greater than it was at the beginning of 1940.

It is planned to spend 10 million dollars this year, the same amount in 1942 and that much or more in 1943. Distribution system additions and service installations are now being increased at a rate of about 25 per cent over 1940.

During the six months ended June 30, nearly 7000 new customers were added. In July sales reached the unprecedented mark of 90,931,667 kilowatt hours, compared with 71,470,476 for the same month last year. During the last decade the generating capacity and number of customers have each increased by 50 per cent. Where the peak daily demand in 1931 was 130,000 kilowatt hours, today it is in the neighborhood of 250,000. This year sales are certain to pass the one billion KWH mark.

Airplane Designing Still Question of Trial and Error

(Editor's note: Is criticism of American-made warplanes justified? Devon Francis, aviation reporter who has just completed an 8000-mile tour of aircraft plants and training centers, takes up the question in this article on the progress of Uncle Sam's air rearmament.)

By Devon Francis

New York, Aug. 15.—Some of the world's best airplanes are being manufactured in American factories during this period of expanding production for air defense.

We also are manufacturing some of the worst.

So is Germany. So is Japan. So is Great Britain. So is Russia.

No world power has a monopoly on turning out badly designed warplanes of poor performance. They are products of a trial-and-error method which, in spite of all the advances in aerodynamic research of the last 20 years, remain the only way that new types can be built.

Engineers with their slide rules can tell a test pilot approximately what a new airplane will do when he takes it aloft. An hour later the test pilot tells them what it has done. Sometimes engineers guess right. Sometimes they guess wrong.

British sources say the original version of the German twin-engine fighter, the Messerschmitt 110, was an airplane of bad performance. Just before the European war began a poorly designed British plane broke squarely in two while it was trundling along the ground.

Criticism of certain American-made warplanes has been at no premium in some quarters. Among those planes is the Curtiss P-40, a pursuit fitted with an inline, liquid-cooled Allison engine.

Dispatches from England, not quoting official sources, have wasted no words in describing the shortcomings of this particular fighter. Lately a British writer, Keith Ayling, took time out to say a disparaging word about the Curtiss in his book, "R. A. F."

Granting for the moment that the P-40 is not up to snuff (the manufacturer says an improved version of the plane ranks with the best), it seems to me, after a survey of our aircraft manufacturing plants, that critics who harp on such shortcomings in our air defense fail to see the forest for the trees.

I would go so far as to say that the Boeing B-17, in its "E" model now getting into production, and the Consolidated B-24, being turned out in quantity in San Diego, probably are the world's best long-range bombers.

In design and performance of such planes the United States has had a jump of years on the rest of the world because our armed services needed them for the defense of two long coastlines. Other powers, save perhaps Russia and Japan, did not need the type.

The North American B-25 and Martin B-26 medium bombers certainly are among the world's best. They are fast, they have range and they carry a good quantity of bombs.

The British are elaborate in their praise of the Douglas light bomber, which they named the Boston, for day, and the Havoc for night operations.

Douglas, Vultee and Curtiss attack bombers have not yet been put to the test, but preliminary reports indicate their performance will be out of the ordinary.

The naval patrol bombers manufactured by the Consolidated company for years have established, with ease, distance records which have not been matched

Six Out of Seven Favor Daylight Saving Time for Washington

Seven persons, including a homesick Englishman, a sunshine-conscious Californian, and a temperamental chef de cuisine, were asked their opinions yesterday about the merits of daylight saving here and elsewhere.

Six of the seven were in favor of it, which partially answered the question of legislators who must act if the Capital is to have such time either this summer, or the year around. Several of the legislators had expressed curiosity over "how the people feel about it."

The one dissenter, a pretty girl, Miss Margaret Benedict, of Forest Glen, Md., said she had heard it was unpopular in Pennsylvania, because "the girls have to go home before the moon came up."

The chef, Nicholas Marchatelli of the Mayflower, opined "that if your eyes are open it doesn't matter what time it is."

But that seemed to be passing the pudding from the oven too uncritically and the chef reflected that often he himself goes to market early of mornings and with the sun at 4 and the clock at 5 he might not be able to see what he wants to select. It is all right otherwise, he said.

Marchatelli's establishment has for years been from 5 to 10 minutes ahead of standard time, anyhow, keeping fast all the clocks its patrons see. Thousands of persons, said the hotel's public relations manager, Osgood Roberts, have made train, plane and bus schedules because the clocks were set ahead.

Most patrons of the big hotel come from the larger American cities having daylight time and the hotel said it could accommodate itself to the change very nicely. Now it hangs a sign "Standard Time" on its clocks.

Jean Morony, attorney, of Chico, Calif., here on business, said "sometimes we think we have too much daylight out there," placing him on the verge of giving a plug for the Chamber of Commerce's sunshine. But put back on the issue, he enthusiastically favored daylight saving time because it gives day workers an extra hour of sun. Morony travels a lot and believed that daylight saving time certainly should be in effect in such key areas as Chicago, New York and Washington—where at present some places observe it while others do not. It can befuddle schedules when not universally applied, he said.

"What could we do without it in England?" asked E. R. Winter, a chauffeur for the British Purchasing Commission. "A man can have an extra hour for tennis."

So thought Miss Rita Peterson, a secretary in the State Department, who took a little sun during her standard time lunch hour yesterday in Lafayette Park. Daylight-saving time would give her and thousands of others more sun. She liked it entirely for that reason.

On a nearby bench, E. A. Godder, retired business man, remarked that in no other city he's ever seen did people go out so much for recreation. "It would benefit thousands of Government employes." But Virginia and the District and Maryland should have similar time because of business and social relationships, he felt.
